The San Juan Difficulty—The Brownsville Affair—Spanish Trade, &c., &c.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Oct. 13.

No action has yet been taken in response to any communication which may have recently been received from the British Government on the subject of the San Juan Island difficulty.

An extraordinary meeting of the Cabinet was held to-day. All the members were present with the exception of Mr. CASS, who was absent on account of physical indisposition.

The reasons for leaving Brownsville without troops are, as stated by an army officer, the unhealthiness of the post, and the belief that there was no necessity for their presence as a means of protection; besides, their services were urgently needed elsewhere in Texas. But since their withdrawal, in addition to the recent invasion by the Mexican banditti, the Indians have committed many excesses on the settlements of the Rio Grande frontier. By this time it is believed troops have been sent thither to protect our citizens.

The Treasury Department has been officially advised by the Secretary of State, that by an order of the Spanish Government, vessels of the United States arriving at ports of Spain, and those of the adjacent islands, are placed on the footing of national vessels as regards the duties of the port and navigation. In consideration of this exemption, Spanish vessels arriving at ports of the United States from Spanish or other foreign ports, will be permitted to enter on the same footing with vessels of the United States, as regards tonnage duties, light money, and all other dues to the United States so far as respects the vessels. Spanish vessels, however, arriving in ports of the United States from Cuba or Porto Rico, not being embraced in the foregoing regulation, are especially provided for by the acts of July, 1832, and June, 1834.

Gen. TWIGGS, in charge of the Department of TEXAS, will, at his own request, be granted leave of absence, with a view to enable him to visit Europe.

The receipts at the Treasury for the week ending on Monday were $1,136,000. The drafts paid amounted to $1,286,000, and the drafts issued to nearly $1,542,000. The amount subject to draft was $4,570,000. The reduction from the amount on hand the previous week was $405,777.

The Secretary of the Treasury has decided on appeal that mink skins are dutiable at eight per centum.

SHE ARRIVES AT HAMPTON ROADS—STATEMENT OF CAPT. SHUFELDT.

NORFOLK, Thursday, Oct. 13.

CAPT. SHUFELDT'S STATEMENT.

The engine was smashed when thirty-six hours out from New-York, and thirty-eight miles S. S. E. of Cape Hatteras.

After the separation from the Dunbarton, on the 7th, the Quaker City made her way north and east under canvas. At 6 P. M. of the 9th she was in latitude 36° 58', longitude 74° 22', 130 miles from the first point named. There a steamer bound south passed without noticing our signals of distress, or the firing of our guns, although apparently near enough for both. At 6½ P. M. the schooner Kingfisher, of New-York, the name of whose captain is not known, bore away for us, and with the true characteristic of a seaman, hailed us, and said he would stick by us till the last, which promise he faithfully performed. The brig Zeno, of Alexandria, also answered our signals, and laid by us until sent in search of a steamer. At 7 o'clock in the evening, a gale from the northward of great force struck the ship, when she laid with her head to the eastward, behaving admirably for forty-eight hours. During this time, it became necessary to heave overboard the deck freight. At noon on the 11th, the gale having abated, in lat 36° 30', long. 74° 25', the ship was taken in tow by the Kingfisher, and aided by her own sails succeeded in sailing 20 miles westward, when, at midnight, the State of Georgia ran down and took us in tow 60 miles northeast of Cape Henry. Capt. SHUFELDT desires publicly to thank the captains of the Dunbarton, Kingfisher, Zena, and State of Georgia, for the prompt and cheerful manner in which they rendered him assistance and without intending to discriminate, wishes particularly to express his gratitude to the captain of the Kingfisher. He is also grateful to the passengers for their consideration towards himself, and to the crew for their perfect quiet and coolness during the accident. (Signed) R. W. SHUFELDT.

The following are the names of the passengers who remained on board the Quaker City, and have arrived in Hampton Roads: E. D. Crabbe, lady and two children; John Chartrand and lady, Miss Chartrand, Alex; Debaudry, Jose Deaz, Manuel Gerard, F. R. Deaz, E. M. Dorance, lady and daughter; Mr. Gabro, lady and son; J. Dezaldo, and C. G. Monsalve.

SENATORIAL NOMINATION AT BUFFALO.

BUFFALO, Thursday, Oct. 13.

REPUBLICAN SENATORIAL NOMINATION IN COLUMBIA COUNTY—A SPIRITED CONTEST.

HUDSON, N. Y., Wednesday, Oct. 13.

At the Republican Senatorial Convention for the Twelfth District, held here to-day, a spirited contest for the nomination took place. The Hon. HENRY C. WETMORE, the Senator who took Mr. MANDEVILLE'S seat last year, was urged upon the Convention by Judge HOGEBOOM, on the policy of Union with the Americans. J. STANTON GOULD, who presided, urged the nomination of JOHN H. KETCHUM, Ex-Member of the Assembly. It was stated that Mr. WETMORE refused to support Mr. SEWARD for United States Senator, and had never joined the Republican Party. On the first formal ballot Mr. WETMORE received 30 votes; the Hon. JAMES MACKIN, 18; and Mr. KETCHUM, 44. Mr MACKIN then withdrew in favor of Mr. WETMORE. On the next ballot Mr. KETCHAM received 50, and Mr. WETMORE 43 votes. Mr. KETCHAM'S nomination was then made unanimous.

The Election in Baltimore.

The Baltimore papers come to us filled with details of disturbances at the polls on Wednesday last. The Sun makes the following comments on the result:

The election for members of the first branch of the City Council came off yesterday, and with a result much more favorable for the cause, and the promotion of law and order than we had anticipated. All that has been done, however, was at the cost of ceaseless effort, thorough consecration to the cause, and much humiliating exposure to insult, violence and outrage; and to such an extent as success has rewarded the friends of reform it has been won over just such an amount of fraud as it was possible to practice. We have well authenticated statements of great wrongs perpetrated, most disreputable conduct on the part of some of the judges of election, shameful dereliction of duty at the hands of many of the Police, and plentiful instances of brutal and disgusting rowdyism. And it is more than probable that means will be taken to fasten upon some of those who have been prominent in the perpetration of violence and fraud some degree of responsibility for their deeds. At the same time we have gratifying assurances that several members of the Police faithfully performed their duty in the face of threats from notorious ruffians who affect to hold or sway the rod of authority. We trust, however, that the days are drawing to a close when ruffianism and official authority will be finally divorced. There is not a doubt in the mind of any impartial man that with a fair election and unmolested polls almost every nominee of the Reform Association would have been elected. Every device was resorted to to drive from the polls respectable men known as the friends of reform, and especially naturalized citizens; and so persistent and violent was the rowdyism at the Ninth Ward polls, that Col. MILES, the candidate of the reformers, withdrew from the contest at mid-day, with the intention of retiring his friends from insult. The returns show, notwithstanding, a very favorable state of the polls in this Ward, and the election of the Opposition candidate by only sixteen votes. That the "circular" of the Mayor was observed neither in the letter nor the spirit, was manifest throughout the day. Public sentiment exacted a little more decency in the conduct even of the most depraved and irresponsible; and the reformers were obliged to win what they have from the degradation of the past by dint of hard, unwearying effort, and dauntless energy. The good work has been well begun, and with earnest perseverance will be brought out to the perfect day, and our city be at length thoroughly retrieved from the despoiling hands of party. The general vote of the city, though the contest was extremely animated, exhibits a great falling off from the grossly fictitious aggregate of the last Mayor's election, when fraud was practiced with unlicensed hand. The details which we subjoin will furnish the reader with a distinct exhibit of the vote and of the members returned, except from the Tenth Ward, where, as stated in another column, the ballot-boxes were broken up, it is said, in consequence of an apprehended majority for the Reform candidates. Such is the character of the most peaceable election we have had in this city for several years past.

The Massachusetts State Reform School.

The Committee on as much of Gov. BANKS' message as related the destruction of the Massachusetts State Reform School, presented their report to the Legislature last Tuesday. The defects in the present system they find to be, 1st, that the power of commitment is often exercised without due consideration, and offers too great facilities for sending those who are not fit; 2d, that the laws requiring towns, and parents or kindred to contribute to the support of the boys, furnish no check upon those facilities, being practically inoperative; 3d, that boys may be committed up to the age of 16, boys committed over the age of 14 are generally hardened offenders; 4th, the commitment of boys for short periods; 5th, alternative sentences, giving the boy an inducement sometimes to be refractory, so that he may be sent to prison for a shorter term; 6th, that the number of inmates (690) was so large that employment could not readily be obtained for all, and the system was unmanageable; 7th, that the boys were congregated in too large a mass, and the most depraved were able to exercise an evil influence over the others. To remedy these defects the Committee propose that boys shall be committed only by Judges of the Superior Court and of the Court of Probate and Insolvency; that the town or city where the boy resides shall contribute 50 cents a week to his support, and may recover the same of his parent or guardian; that no boy over 14 shall be committed to the school, and all shall be sent during his minority; that alternate sentences shall be abolished, and that a correctional department shall be established for the most refractory. To overcome the difficulties arising from the size of the school and the aggregation of the boys, the Committee propose that the injured portion of the original building be reconstructed and remodelled, so that it shall accommodate 200 boys in five classes; first, a correctional department of 25 or 30; second, a receiving department of 40 or 50 each, who can least safely be trusted outside the walls. Each department to be under its own sub-master, a practical farmer, and the boys to be separate from the other departments. New precautions, by brick partition walls, to be taken against fire. They also propose the erection of three or four other buildings, to be as distant as possible from each other, and to accommodate thirty boys each—plain farm houses, which might be erected at small expense by using the bricks upon the ground. They would thus limit the whole number of boys to 350, and if more buildings are needed they should be elsewhere than at Westborough. The Committee proceed to state the plan which they propose for the large number of additional boys who must be sentenced, viz.: the plan of a nautical branch of the School. A suitable ship can probably be obtained and fitted up for $15,000, and a tender for less than $5,000. The annual cost is estimated as follows: Salaries—Captain, $1,200 or $1,500; first and second officers, $1,000; five petty officers, $1,500 or $1,800; two seamen, $432; chaplain and teachers, $1,400; provisions, clothing, fuel and lights for 150 boys, at $65 per year, $9,750; repairs, $1,200; board of officers, $416; incidental, $600; total, $18,098. Fifty additional boys, $3,250. Total, $21,348.

THE FRENCH ARMY.

Augmentation of the Imperial Guard—The New Rifled Cannon—Drill and Equipment of the French Troops.

[The subjoined letter appeared in so small a portion of our issue of Wednesday, that we deem it proper to reproduce it. It contains matters of unusual interest. —ED. TIMES.]

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Thursday, Sept. 22, 1859.

Just before the late war the number of men in the regiments of the Infantry of the Line was augmented from 1,800 to 3,200. Since the war the regiments of Infantry of the Imperial Guard have also been augmented from 2,800 to 3,600 men. During the late campaign the regiments of the Guard did not muster more than 1,800 men to the regiment—something like a normal number of working men to a regiment of 2,800. Hereafter the same regiments will place in line for action something like 2,700 men. The Guard is now composed of three regiments of Grenadiers, four of Voltigeurs, one of Zouaves, and one of Gendarmerie which gives an effective force of 32,400 men, besides a battalion of Chasseurs 1,200 strong. The cavalry of the Guard now numbers six regiments, each of 1,200 men; to this must still be added two regiments of artillery, the Engineer corps and the Train, which gives a grand total for the Imperial Guard, as at present constituted, of about 45,000 men. There is talk of transferring the two regiments of Carabiniers—a splendid body of men—from the Line to the Guard, and of creating a division of Fusiliers, which will carry the total of the Guard to more than 60,000 men.

In 1814 the Imperial Guard constituted of itself a grand army, forming two corps of Infantry, thus divided: Thirteen regiments of Grenadiers, commanded by Majors-Commandants; thirteen regiments of Chasseurs-a-pied, each of these corps having at its head two Generals of Division, Colonel and Lieutenant-Colonel; and a regiment of Flaukers. The Cavalry was composed of a division of Mounted Grenadiers, one of Dragoons, one of Chasseurs, two regiments of Light-horse Lancers, a division of Gendarmerie, and a squadron or Mamelukes. There were, besides, a foot regiment of Pupils, two battalions of Engineers, a foot brigade of Artillery and another mounted, a brigade of the Train, and a crew of Marines, who, it will be recollected, did good service in the Russian campaign.

The necessity of increasing the Guard, and its importance in a great action, were manifest at Magenta and Solferino. In planning a great battle the Line takes the first rank and engages first in the action; the Guard is held in reserve by the Commander-in-Chief to be thrown into weak points as they may arise, to carry difficult points, or in fine to be so manœuvred as infallibly to gain the battle. Thus at Solferino, the Voltigeurs, four regiments in number, by their last rapid charge along the heights between Solferino and Cavriana, brought the battle to a close in the strongest part of the Austrian position. So too at Magenta the Grenadiers did the most important service of the day. The importance indeed of having a large reserve corps of picked men under the hand of the Commander-in-Chief to be thrown here and there during a battle, as their services may be needed, cannot be overrated. The Emperor NAPOLEON having seen the great utility of even the small body of men he thus wielded at Magenta and Solferino, was brought naturally to the conclusion that an increase of this force would render an increased effectiveness to his tactics on the field. The army will not be increased on account of this increase of the Guard; the men are only transferred from the Line, and are chosen among the élite. The Guard will thus be composed of tried men, and, carried to the number of fifty or sixty thousand, will hereafter form the most formidable feature of the French army. In case of another war or continued wars, we may look for a revival of the glories of the Old Guard.

On the question of guns of long range and precision France has measured arms with Russia and Austria, and feels secure on that side. But she is not so sure about the Armstrong gun, and there is some talk even about the gun of Gen. JAMES. So many pretended inventions are coming to the surface, each one more fearful than the other, that the question has become a vital one. Continental armies are now so nearly equal on all other points that the longest carrying gun must hereafter decide the victory. Who is now the happy possessor of this gun? Since the war, and since the official reports on the capacity of the Armstrong gun, the French profess to have improved their gun to the capacity of carrying five and six thousand yards, which is the utmost range of the Armstrong gun. This may be true or may be bravado; no official report of such modification has been published. But it is not improbable, since the Armstrong weapon only differs from the French in its material of construction and its loading at the breech.

The French rifled cannon, which produced such formidable effects during the late war, is not much of a curiosity, after all, Rifled guns were first used in America, and this is only the application of the same principle to cannon, with a variation at the breech of a very simple nature. These guns—those, at least, used in the Italian campaign—were bronze, much smaller than the ordinary cannon, and of the calibre "4." They each have six twisted rifles, the rifles being about an inch wide and the third of an inch deep. In the bottom there is a narrow chamber to receive the powder, like the carabine of DELAVIGNE, and like the old shell-guns still in use in the French artillery. The projectile rests on the border of this chamber. This projectile is of a cylindro-spherical form, resembling the ball of the infantry; is in iron, and is hollow and conical, like the latter. The cylindrical base of the bullet is pierced in six places, and into these six drills are introduced as many plugs of pewter. It is these six pieces of pewter, placed in the circumference of the base of the ball, and corresponding to the six rifles of the gun, which perform the important duty of "slugging." They are forced into the rifles by the explosion of the powder, and thus give to the bullet the precision and the force of the carabine ball.

Sometimes the projectiles are filled with balls, and are made to explode at a given distance. To effect this, the match, which is in communication in the interior of the projectile with the fulminating material, is marked exteriorly with various figures, indicating the distance to which it will carry before exploding. The match is cut according to the desired distance at which the gunner wishes to throw the ball—at 400 or 600 yards, or further. The rammer of the cannon is hollow at its base, so as to embrace the conical head of the projectile, the same as the ramrod of the balle-à-tige or Minié guns. The "sight" is mobile, and is fixed in the right of the cannon. The distance to which this gun will carry with precision is 2,600 metres; the total distance to which it carries is 4,500 metres. (The metre is 39 37-100 inches—a little more than a yard.)

A great advantage of these new guns is their lightness and facility of management. American officers say that the gun-carriages are too heavy, and the coupling awkward. But this is an amelioration more easily accomplished than that of the ordnance itself. Nevertheless, during the Italian campaign they were handled as are our own "flying artillery," appearing rapidly at all points of the horizon, flying from hillock to hillock, and opening upon the enemy wherever a good point of range could be obtained. With them hills could be escaladed which were heretofore inaccessible to other cannon, and from which the ranks of the enemy might be decimated at immense disances.

The American officers who witnessed the late entry of the army of Italy into Paris were not at all struck with the martial bearing of the troops. The fact is, aside from their officers, their bearing is not martial. This proceeds from two causes: In the first place, their step is slovenly and disorderly as a mass, and their uniform, cheap, convenient and military, if you please, is not striking. The Seventh New-York Regiment, by the beauty of their uniform and their martial bearing, would create an immense sensation in Paris. Even the new Italian National Guard, with nothing but a military cap and a musket, had an air of strength and of gallantry, borrowed from their perfect drill, which made them show to more advantage than the French soldiers at their side.

But as the French general said (of the famous charge at Balaklava, "C'est beau, mais ce n'est pas la guerre!" So a handsome tenue, a perfect drill, a mathematical step, is magnificent and looks like war, but it is not. A French soldier is never taught, even for gala occasions, to observe exactly the step in marching. To walk square and in time is fatiguing. But to compensate for this he is taught gymnastics, is made to march long distances, and has a general hygiene calculated to develope a man capable of great physical strength and endurance. When an old French soldier wishes to judge the merit of a battalion passing before him, how does he do it? If he sees that the shoulders sustain vigorously the weight of the sac—if the step is firm and elastic, he says, with satisfaction, "There goes a battalion that will fight." But if the step is heavy—if the hand is placed on the hip to support the sac, the old soldier shakes his head, and is apt to say: "There's a battalion that needs two years' work in Algiers!"

The sac and the armament weigh together from sixty to seventy pounds—shoes, shirts, brushes, ten and pol'es, piquets, blankets, overcoats, pantaloons, ten packets of cartouches, of one pound each, thirteen pounds for the gun and furniture, and food for a fortnight. The much-vaunted Roman soldier never carried as much. To this add an African heat of 100 to 110 degrees, with marches of thirty and forty miles a day, and one arrives at a tolerable appreciation of what constitutes a good soldier in France. A soldier who will carry his sac upright under such circumstances, who marches on, notwithstanding his feet are bleeding and his throat parched with thirst, may be relied on when the hour of battle comes.

It is thus that, in the French army, they estimate their soldiers. A man who cannot march is regarded as no soldier; those who fall behind are ridiculed by the rest. An army unused to fatigue would have melted under the sun at Solferino as rapidly as did the Austrians before the destructive French cannon. In Africa, when a Grenadier or a Voltigeur falls by the roadside, his companions jerk off his epaulettes and degrade him. The great superiority of the French soldier consists, then, not in his fine physique or his martial bearing, for in these he is second to the soldiers of many other nations, but in his gymnastic and hygienic training, in his long marches under the sac, in his constant exercise with the gun, in his patience, his implicit obedience of orders, in the homogeneousness of rank, and finally, in a quality derived from birth and not from discipline—élan.

The uniform of the French army, with the exception of that of a few of the corps d'élite, is less martial, less picturesque, than that of many other continental armies. The uniform of the officers, while it is neat and soldierlike, is far from that dazzling brilliancy of the officers of other armies, as for instance, the Austrian, Spanish, Prussian, and Piedmontese armies. In this simplicity of costume lies one of the points of strength of the French army, as a whole. A man dressed as brilliantly as some foreign officers we saw the present Summer, can have no other occupation than that of the preservation of his person and his costume. The French costume, on the contrary, is so simple, it consists of such few pieces, and these are so exactly regulated in form, cut and color, by the law, that he need absolutely have no thought about his dress. In looking at a group of Austrian or Spanish officers of rank, one cannot escape the conviction that one-half their time must be spent on their handsome persons and brilliant uniforms, and that on the field of battle their efficiency must be much enfeebled by thoughts foreign to the employ of the moment. A French officer, notwithstanding the plainness of his uniform, looks the officer all over; in fact, he is the only officer in the world who bears the seal of his profession, whether in military or civil dress. The French officer dominates all others in the true military type; in fact, France is the only nation which possesses this military type. They are easy, elegant and graceful, whether in the ranks in uniform, or in the parlor in civil black; but the officer is to be recognized everywhere, and this one cannot say of the officers of any other army.

The white coat of the Austrian Infantry, an elegant and very martial uniform, but too costly, has just been changed for a blue gray coat, lined with red, and with black cuffs. The change is an important one for the budget, and a desirable one for the army.

MALAKOFF.

THE CAPTURE OF THE FILLIBUSTERS.

From the New-Orleans Delta, Oct. 8.

For some time past it has been generally understood that a fillibuster movement was on foot, or at least supposed to be, from the fact of the presence in and about our city of persons who have formerly been connected with expeditions of that character. The exact nature of the expedition, the number of men who were to compose it, and the time and place of departure, were kept a profound secret, and even those who were supposed to be engaged in it, knew nothing as to the ultimate plans of the head mover.

An advertisement which appeared in this paper, signed by Capt. HARRY MAURY, of Mobile, whose exploits as commander of the schooner Susan are no doubt still fresh in the minds of our readers, inviting men to accompany him to the Chiriqui Gold Diggings in a vessel which was to sail on the 1st inst. from Mobile, was generally supposed by the knowing ones to have some connection with the expedition afloat in this city, supposed to be against Nicaragua. This announcement kept the United States officials in Mobile on the alert, but up to the 1st inst. they failed to discover anything like an expedition on the vessel which was to be sailed by the gallant Captain.

For a week or two past it was known to many of our people that men were congregating at a dépôt some seven miles below this city, on the Algiers side, near the Powder Magazine, and that the camp was daily receiving additions from Alabama and the adjoining States.

Collector HATCH, becoming aware of the fact, set to work zealously to frustrate the designs of the leaders of the alleged expedition, and instructed a number of his officials to keep strict watch upon the camp, to note down all that transpired, and to obtain the names of the prominent actors in the affair. The avenues leading to the place were closely scrutinized, and a constant report handed in by those detailed, which kept the Collector tolerably well posted in all that was going on.

On Saturday last a number of passengers went down the Opelousas Railroad to Berwick's Bay, in order to take the steamer Galveston, for Galveston, Texas. There being a large proportion of men, excited suspicion, and their movements were watched, but it turned out that they were merely passengers on their way to Texas, who never dreamed of the suspicions they had given rise to. This was the origin of the statement by telegraph and elsewhere that an expedition had sailed from Berwick's Bay, which has since proved entirely without foundation.

After this little excitement, the camp at Powder House was watched more closely than ever, and the names of the vessels wishing to clear closely noted down. On Monday, the agents of the steamship Philadelphia, Capt. GRIFFIN, applied to the Custom-house to clear for Aspinwall, in ballast, but the agents refusing to submit to having a Custom-house officer placed on board, when there was nothing on the vessel to warrant suspicion, the Collector refused to grant her the necessary documents. We merely give this fact in connection with the affair, though we have no reason to believe that the Philadelphia had any more to do with the alleged expedition than any other vessel in port—still she excited the suspicion of Collector HATCH, who positively refused her clearance. The camp at Powder House was not watched so closely that night as before, but the Philadelphia had eyes upon her all the time, watching for the first moment when she should make an attempt to fire up or cut loose her moorings. But the good, staunch old ship lay at her moorings, as quietly and undisturbed as if no shadow of suspicion was thrown upon her, and loomed up from the levee against the starlighted horizon in the east. The clever captain and her officers and crew were soundly asleep in their berths, and not a sound was heard by the vigilant watchers but the noise of the current as it rippled over the lower buckets of the wheel.

There was a livelier scene being enacted just then at the Powder House camp, though, which aroused the persons in the vicinity, but did not reach the ears of the officials. The tow-boat Panther had very quietly steamed across the river, thrown her lines ashore, and crouched below the bank and waited for orders. The embarkation was effected in good order, and but a short time elapsed before the camp at Powder House was deserted, and the cabin and deck of the tug filled with over 100 passengers, bound for—where? The Panther went down the river in her usual rapid and roaring style, and not many hours elapsed before the head of the Passes was made, and the steamer's bow headed down Passe-a-l'Outre.

The Revenue Cutter being advised of an expedition, and with orders to intercept it, was being towed from her position at Southwest Pass to the head of the Passes, by the steamboat Kimball, when the Panther went down Passe-a-l'Outre and stood out to sea.

There was considerable excitement next morning (Tuesday) when it was discovered that the birds had flown; and considerable curiosity on the point as to what steamer could have possibly taken them. None had cleared! And the usually very orderly and inoffensive towboats were not suspected. But the wires, those annihilators of space and time, soon brought the intelligence, and the mystery was solved.

Before the revenue cutter could well determine what course to pursue, as it had been discovered that the Panther had not sufficient provisions on board to stay out at sea long, the towboat herself appeared in the offing at the Southwest Pass, and running up, landed her passengers—who had not a single firearm or munition of war about them—upon the shore of that delightful abode of mosquitoes and alligators, known as the Balize. The cutter not being deemed sufficient to protect the Pass from an invasion, or to prevent the men again embarking upon some unknown vessel for their place of destination, the steam-tug Enoch Train was chartered to go down, with a long-tom on her forecastle, and see that the men did not get away. She left our city on Wednesday evening, and got down during the night. Whether she had occasion to fire off the cannon or not this reporter has not learned. Night before last a company of artillery from Baton Rouge, having been called out by United States Marshal KENNEDY, came down under the command of Capt. JAMES RICKETTS, who also commanded the company of United States troops who were sent down during the Vigilance Committee excitement in this city. They were immediately transferred to the steamer Kimball, which had come up from the Balize for that purpose, and departed for the musquito region at 11 P. M.

On board of the Kimball, besides the military, were the United States Marshal and officials, with warrants for nine officers and 150 men, against whom affidavits had been made and sworn to before Commissioner LUSHER. The Kimball got down on yesterday morning, and as the arrest en masse is presumed, we may look for the return of both expeditions to-day or to-morrow—and then comes the farce.

The steamship Fashion, of fillibuster notoriety, created a little excitement by crossing the bar off the Southwest Pass, while the men were there, on Wednesday, but we are satisfied that she was merely on her course to Galveston, where she is bound—the shortest route being in close to the Balize.

Orders have been received from the owners of the Philadelphia to lay the ship up, and the Captain has been ordered North—to be accounted for from the fact that the Government refused to clear her under any conditions.

SOUTHWEST PASS, Oct. 7.—The fishing party encamped at this point were all arrested to-day, about 1 o'clock by Mr. KENNEDY, United States Marshal, upon a warrant based upon the affidavit of one HENRY PAUL JONES. Gens. WALKER and HENNINGSEN, Col. ANDREWS and Capts. MAURY, FASSAOUX and WEST, are particularly named. To accomplish this feat it required the revenue cutter Lewis Cass, propeller Enoch Train and steamer Kimball—on the latter being a company of United States soldiers. The soldiers, however, were kept out of sight until the men had agreed to peaceably surrender to the authorities of the United States, having in their opinion violated no law of the United States. The surrender was the only resort left, as the Collector of New-Orleans had issued orders prohibiting any vessel bringing them up or taking them down the river. The party were getting a little short of provisions and water, though they have been living high on fish chowder, shrimp soup, oysters and crabs.

THE SOUTHERN OPPOSITION.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Tuesday, Oct. 11, 1859.

Though many Southern "Oppositionists" here and elsewhere, "in accordance with the Supreme Court's declaration in the Dred Scott case," still "assert the power and the duty of the National Legislature to protect, mediately or immediately, the rights of slave property in the National Territories," they now express themselves inclined to fraternize with the Southern Opposition, despite their assertion of the contrary doctrine, in order to elect an Opposition Speaker for the next House of Representatives. Their first choice, say their organs, is the Hon. EMERSON ETHERIDGE, of Tennessee; but their representatives from Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina and Georgia would be willing to support Mr. DAVIS, of Maryland, or even Mr. CORWIN, of Ohio, rather than suffer the election of a Democrat, an appendage of the Administration. They have no insurmountable objection to the support of Mr. CORWIN. It would be far better for the Opposition to elect him than to place the organization of the next House in Democratic hands. They declare they much prefer some patriotic Southern or Northern Conservative to a Democrat from any section. They see "no just reason, under heaven, why the Republicans and Southern Americans should not unite in such an organization of the House as shall cause a prompt and full exposure of the multitudinous atrocities of the Government."

The three gentlemen mentioned are known to be conservative and moderate men, opposed to the Territorial policy and practices of the past and present Administration, to the reopening of the foreign slave-traffic, or any Federal or State connivance thereat, and to any attempt at a renewal of the Slavery agitation on the floor of the Thirty-sixth Congress. Mr. CORWIN, while opposed to direct or indirect Federal extension or protection of Slavery or slaveholding in the Territories, is not called or considered an out-and-out "Republican." In fact, he is not fully identified with any existing party. He is rather, an independent statesman. "Republicans," par excellence, are for the Congressional prohibition of Territorial Slavery, and for State nullification of the Fugitive Slave law; but THOMAS CORWIN, you know, avows that he is for the strict observance of that law, so long as it stands on the statute-book, and that he seeks no further Congressional legislation against Slavery, "because there is no Territory to which Slavery will go." He wants no Congressional action or agitation against it, because of the impossibility of its extension and the consequent uselessness of intervention. By the way, his agitating Kentucky friend, Mr. PRENTICE, has also recently acknowledged this impossibility. Though, like many of our "Oppositionists" and "Democrats," he keeps on agitating for the mediate or immediate Congressional protection of Slavery in the Territories, as if of the utmost importance to the South, he asserts that "the South has lost all possible chance of obtaining further Slave representation from additional States coming into the Union. HENRY WINTER DAVIS, like Mr. CORWIN, (perhaps more than he,) is for conquest, having nothing more to do or say about it. In his Baltimore "Representative speech" of the 5th ult., he said, with his characteristic independence and decision: "On the vexed question our policy is to oppose all agitation, all aggression from the North or the South—all schemes direct or indirect, to alter by Congress the actual condition of the Territories, and the actual prohibition of the Slave-trade with Africa." While he and the "Americans" of Maryland will "unite with the Opposition of the North, rather than with the Democrats of the South," they "sternly repudiate all sectionalism in every form, North or South." This, I understand, is unquestionably the position of Mr. ETHERIDGE and his associate Oppositionists.

Like the Opposition of Georgia, these Tennesseeans proclaim their belief that "the further agitation of the Slavery question will tend to no practical good to any portion of the country, and should, therefore, cease." Accordingly, I learn they have not agitated near so much as their Kentucky neighbors, and are for putting a stop to it. Mr. ETHERIDGE, I take it, is a man rather of the John Bell stamp,—constitutionally and habitually averse to Congressional legislation or debate about Slavery, to all Federal intervention for or against it. It seems to me not unlikely that, whatever may be his dislike of the theory of Territorial Popular Sovereignty, he would consent to its practical recognition and acceptance by Congress as an expedient for getting rid of the "absorbing topic" and attending to the wants of the country.

Many Oppositionists in Kentucky and throughout the South want this matter put to rest forever. They are, practically non-interventionists. Like Judge NICHOLAS, of this city, they want it taken out and kept out of national party politics. So opposed are they to any more such agitation, that, like Messrs. GALES and SEATON, of the National Intelligencer, and a distinguished Virginia correspondent of the NEW-YORK TIMES, with all their repudiation of Territorial Sovereignty, as a theory, they may soon feel themselves constrained practically to admit it as an expedient for obtaining the total and everlasting banishment of the subject of Slavery from the halls of Congress. They will be for Territorial, like State, popular sovereignty in all domestic matters rather than endure much longer the constant wire-pulling, wrangling and bungling about one such matter at Washington. The real tendency of the Southern Opposition, generally, I should hope and apprehend, is to adopt and carry out the counsel of HENRY CLAY, in 1850, which, if I mistake not, was in his own words this:

"The true principle which ought to regulate the action of Congress in forming Territorial governments for each newly acquired domain, is to refrain from all legislation on the subject of Slavery in the Territory acquired, so long as it retains the Territorial form of government." PONTIAC.

The following list includes all the districts that are entitled, either on account of being vacant, or under the new arraugement, to an appointment in the Naval Academy at this date: Alabama, 3d, 6th, and 7th districts; Connecticut, 3d; Georgia, 1st, 4th and 8th; Illinois, 9th; Indiana, 2d; Iowa, 2d; Kentucky, 3d, 4th, 6th, and 7th; Louisiana, portion of the American Press has already protested against the insolent violence of Gen. HARNEY; and if suitable discretion is displayed by the offended party, there is reason to hope that the good feeling of the American people may be generally enlisted on the side of peace and justice. The antipathies of former times are said to be dying out, and at this moment there is reason to believe that the most universal popular favorite in the Union is no other than the same exalted personage who commands the unanimous respect and loyalty of Englishmen. A few years without a quarrel, and the two great kindred nations would perhaps coincide in their tastes, their fancies, and their prejudices, as they already agree in language, in law, and in the fundamental characteristics of the race. A territorial dispute between England and America is really like a question whether a township belongs to Yorkshire or Lancashire. It is highly proper that the legal question should be settled, but it is unnecessary to import bitterness and animosity into the dispute. It seems impossible that so trivial a difference can be settled by any other than amicable means.

From the Manchester Guardian.

Before the question of the boundary line comes under discussion at all, explanations must first be given as to the occupation of San Juan by American troops. This is a question affecting the honor of England, and cannot be "compromised" in any way whatever. If Gen. HARNEY's conduct receive the sanction of his Government, England has no choice but to assert her rights, however reluctantly, by force of arms; and, if negotiations are to be entered into on the subject of the boundary, the preliminary step must be the withdrawal of every American soldier from the soil of the disputed island.

When the original question comes to be discussed, without the military power being thrown into either scale, it will, we think, soon be clearly established that the island of San Juan belongs, both in law and in justice, to Great Britain. Were the matter submitted now to any impartial arbitrator, we have not the shadow of a doubt that he would declare the American claim to be monstrous and absurd. Indeed, in the worst days of the English law, when every facility was afforded to the lowest class of lawyers to exercise their wits in devising shifts for their clients by picking holes in legal phraseology, a man who should have set up such a plea as that by which the Americans delay the execution of the treaty of 1846, would have run the risk of being laughed out of court. With an ingenuity worthy of some pettifogging country attorney, they discovered that directly under the forty-ninth parallel of latitude there were two islets lying a mile or two off the coast of Vancouver's Island, and that, by taking the point where the parallel struck the middle of the channel nearest to the island, as starting point, they might obtain a boundary line, which would bring them to the Haro Canal, without any very violent deviation from the strict southerly course prescribed by the treaty. Such is the American claim, as it stands at present. It rests on the supposition that, by the "channel which separates the continent from Vancouver's Island," the framers of the treaty of 1846 meant a channel which separates the island from an islet on its coast; and their demand to have San Juan yielded up to them is as righteous as if,—the middle of the English Channel being agreed upon as the boundary between France and England,—our astute neighbor were to claim the Isle of Wight, insisting that the "channel" indicated was that which separates the island from Hampshire.

VIEWS OF A BELLIGERENT.

A correspondent of the London Times, who is evidently a Colonist, and exceedingly excited about the occupation of San Juan, writes in this wise from Victoria, Vancouver's Island:

"Pursuing a policy of peace and conciliation, Capt. PREVOST, the British Boundary Commissioner, after two long cruises, got hold of the American Commissioner, and besought him to use his good offices with his countrymen to induce them to withdraw the troops until the two home Governments could be consulted. But he met with such a reception as he will not soon forget; and, if he was not insulted, what passed was, at any rate, very gross. Capt. PREVOST is a very quiet, gentlemanly man, and was quite disgusted at the tirade poured upon him.

This 'occupation' excited the indignation of the British public here to a degree, as you may imagine. View it as one will it is an act of war, public or private. But I will refrain from criticising it. All here feel that the nation has been insulted most grossly, and rely with confidence on prompt action by the home Government for the redress of the outrage.

To the United States the islands are really useless except for the purposes of annoyance, eyesore, and impediment. They are far removed from their Territories on the mainland, and their position is intended evidently as a wedge to wrest Vancouver's Island and British Columbia from England.

To Great Britain the island of San Juan is of the first importance. It is the key to the Gulf of Georgia, It commands the narrow channels through which alone British Columbia and the inner coast of Vancouver's Island can be approached. We require it to give us a right of access, ingress, and egress to our own possessions, unmolested by another power. Both Vancouver's Island and British Columbia had better be given up if we part with San Juan: for a fortification on this island would command our western passage to Fraser River by the Canal de Haro."

ITALIAN AFFAIRS.

THE ZURICH PROGRAMME OF PEACE.

Paris (Sept. 25) Correspondence of the London Times.

Abandoning their inaction of the last fortnight, the Plenipotentiaries at Zurich, according to my letters of yesterday's date from that city, are again applying themselves to their task, which is said to have been diminished in compass by the dispatches Count COLLOREDO lately received from Vienna. On the extensive basis on which they were previously working, it was evident that they might have remained for months or years, giving dinners to the worthy Swiss, who have courteously and hospitably received them, promenading on the banks of the lake, and listening to the Ranz des Vâches, without getting a step nearer to the signature of the treaty they met to conclude. So they have laid down a more modest programme, which, if my information, as I cannot doubt, be correct, is as follows: A definitive treaty of peace will be signed by the three Powers, and an end will thus be put to the state of armistice, which was prorogued, as you will remember, at the first meeting of the Conference, early in August, until peace should be concluded and ratified. Another treaty will be drawn up, by which Austria will cede Lombardy to France, who, in her turn, will make it over to Sardinia. Before this can be done, however, it is clear that on certain points the three Governments must be agreed, since France can take Lombardy from Austria only on conditions upon which Sardinia will be willing to take it from her. The most knotty point in the business of the double transfer is the question of the debt, and on this head it is believed that Austria is likely to abate some of her pretensions which Piedmont finds exorbitant, and which Baron DE BOURQUENEY is disposed to consider exaggerated. Should it be found impossible to agree on this point, some say that the formal cession will nevertheless take place, and that it and other difficulties will be reserved for subsequent settlement. With reference to such unsettled points as the Italian Confederation, restoration of the Dukes, &c., documents will be drawn up, which can be signed, however, only by the Austrian and French Plenipotentiaries. Austria is tenacious as to the restoration, and France as to the confederation, while Sardinia utterly rejects the former, and will not agree to the latter under present circumstances, and in the present state of Italy, and thus it is that the documents referred to, and which will be little or nothing more than a repetition of the Villafranca stipulations, will not receive the signature of VICTOR EMANUEL'S delegate. It may be thought that this abstaining on the part of the Sardinian Government is virtually almost of the nature of a protest against the convention entered into by the two Emperors, and to which the King, not previously consulted, was summoned to subscribe. The situation is peculiar, and perhaps unprecedented. Meanwhile, unless some fresh instructions are brought by a courier, who is daily expected at Zurich, it is believed that the Conference will conclude its labors within a very few days, in the manner above indicated.

THE EMPEROR'S VIEWS.

From the London Spectator.

A rumor, emanating I believe from a good source, and which has produced a favorable effect on the Bourse, leads us to expect an amicable settlement of the Italian question. It appears that the Emperor accepts the plan of the King of the Belgians, which is to give the fortresses of Peschiera and Mantua, and the States of Parma and Modena to Sardinia, to reinstate the House of Lorraine in Tuscany, and to restore the Legations to the Pope after introducing a variety of necessary reforms. Very few people can divine the real intentions of his Imperial Majesty, but it is believed in the highest quarters that he does not desire to obtain Tuscany for his cousin; nor is there any foundation for the report, which has circulated lately, that the Count DE FLANDRES is to be put forward as a candidate. It is also confidently expected that the last part of the treaty of Zurich, which concerns the cession of Lombardy, will be signed in the course of next week. I have just heard on the best authority that, included in the arrangement I have communicated to you, is the stipulation that Venetia shall have a government, institutions and army of its own, under the Archduke FERDINAND MAXIMILIAN, with the title of Grand Duke of Venetia. This stipulation has the concurrence of Austria. A Congress is also to be held at Brussels, of which King LEOPOLD is to be President.

There is still a hitch; Austria persists in keeping an Austrian army in Venetia. When this difficulty has been surmounted, the treaty will be signed by Austria and France, and a Congress held at Brussels.

IMPORTANT DIPLOMATIC RUMOR.

From the Indépendance Belge.

The Conference at Zurich is to separate after having insured the preservation of peace between Austria and France. Piedmont will only sign a prolongation of the armistice: but in order that she may not be left alone in presence of her adversary, with causes of dispute which might possibly rekindle the flame, all arrangements of Italy shall be submitted to a Congress.

This Congress shall be held at Brussels and all the great Powers shall be invited to attend it, even Spain, in order that she may represent the Duke of Parma. With regard to the presidency of the King of the Belgians there had been much discussion. This is rendered more likely by the fact that the Congress is to be composed, if not of crowned heads, at least of princes belonging to reigning families.

Prince ALBERT will represent England, and the Archduke MAXIMILIAN, Austria. This arrangement would be without precedent, the meetings at Vienna, at Aix-la-Chapelle, and Verona, at which princes and kings assisted, being in fact merely diplomatic congresses.

The question of the precedency settled, it remains to be decided upon what bases the Congress shall enter upon the settlement of Italian affairs. On this subject the reports are more contradictory than on any other.

The correspondent who yesterday sent us some detailed information on the point adheres to his statements, and maintains that Mantua and Peschiera are to be given up, Austria having already consented to garrison the fortresses of the quadrilateral—Verona excepted—by none but Italian troops raised in Venetia. He admits that the Duchy of Modena may share the fate of that of Parma, but adds that this point is earnestly contested.

THE GREAT EASTERN.

HER TIME OF DEPARTURE.

From the latest accounts respecting the state of the Great Eastern, we learn that great as is the diligence displayed in prosecuting the needful repairs, there is no chance whatever of "the big ship" getting away on the 8th, and perhaps not even during October at all. It is not improbable that the vessel may in a few days leave her present moorings at Portland and go round to Southampton, which, it is thought, for many reasons, would be more eligible than her present station.

GOSSIP ON THE LIVERPOOL 'CHANGE.

From the Liverpool Journal.

The Great Eastern being now managed principally by Liverpool men, that wonder of the waters excites more than usual interest on 'Change. The talk yesterday was that, as she was built as a commercial speculation, the direction of the directors should be in the line of remuneration; that at Portland, without any consumption of coal, the small tax on visitors would realize £600 a day; that at Holyhead the same price of admission will produce something like £2,000 a day; that the sight of her gratifies the public, and that the sight-seers pay better than passengers; that, this being the case, it would be absurd to sail her prematurely for America or any other place; that her machinery is still imperfect; that it has to be tested; that for this purpose several trips should be made; that every trip should terminate in a populous and paying port, and that by the time she is properly ready for a long voyage in the Spring, a considerable amount of her debt would be liquidated; that a voyage next Spring would be quite in time, and that by that time her perfect safety will be practically guaranteed. The further talk was that the directors had a meeting yesterday to decide on this point, and that they are too enlightened to sacrifice the future to the present; that it would ill accord with the dignity associated with the enterprise to make a show-ship of the mightiest ship ever built; that they have made the whole world their debtor, and that they should take care not to impair the obligation by endangering the regard of mankind; that they will, therefore, no doubt sail the ship as soon as possible, Winter or Summer, and that, in a pecuniary sense, it is their interest to do so; that if the Great Eastern go now to the United States all America will go to see her; that at home curiosity has been partially exhausted; that at Portland and New-York (which she can enter) the admission of visitors would yield the sum ten times told to be booked in this country; that, looking beyond this legitimate income, there is another and far greater to be obtained; that, let the Great Eastern fulfill her promise, as no doubt she will, the company will be called on by Government to build many more, and it is in constructing these that the directors should look for their substantial reward. The general talk was that the public have nothing to do in the matter, and that the directors may be left to the exercise of their own judgment as to what is proper and profitably to be done; that, naturally enough, the people of Liverpool are anxous to see the Great Eastern; that they are judges of big ships, and that their impression of the biggest might be of some practical value; that, fortunately, the opportunity desired will be afforded within three weeks, that on the 12th of October she will be at Holyhead; that on the 15th the Queen will come down to see her: that her Majesty will be the guest of Col. PENNANT, Penrhyn Castle, near Bangor; that she will stay over Sunday, the 16th, and proceed next day, the 17th, to inspect the Great Eastern; that after the inspection the Queen and royal party will return that evening to Windsor; that the week following there will be great doings in Wales, probably at the George Hotel, near the Menaibridge; that the directors of the London and Northwestern will entertain the directors of the Great Eastern at a magnificent banquet, over which the Marquis of Chandos will preside; that Liverpool will, of course, be empty, on this occasion, for several days; and that he who sees these doings will be happy fifty years hence in relating to his grandchildren all he saw and all he heard.

RUSSIA.

HOW SCHAMYL WAS CAPTURED.

St. Petersburgh Correspondence of Le Nord.

After numerous defeats, SCHAMYL, as a last resource, shut himself up, with 400 murides who remained faithful to him, in the fortified aoûl of Gounib. Gounib is a fortified stronghold, on very elevated ground, of large extent. On three sides the rocks are perpendicular; the only other side was deemed impregnable, and it was supposed that a handful of determined men could have defended it for months against any odds.

Prince BARIATINSKI ordered the attack to be made on both sides at once. The attack commenced on the 7th of September. While the chief attack was made on the only accessible side a number of men, who volunteered, scaled the rocks. The enemy was taken by surprise. A fearful struggle ensued. The resistance was most determined. Of the 400 murides in Gounib only 47 remained alive. Five guns were captured.

SCHAMYL retired to a house cut out in the solid rock. The plateau was covered with corpses. We have lost more than 100 men. Prince BARIATINSKI, who had come up, summoned SCHAMYL to surrender, and ordered his men to cease firing. The Imam asked upon what conditions.

"Come out without conditions," said the Prince.

SCHAMYL came out, and the Prince met him, though advised by his officers to retire for fear of treachery.

"Are you SCHAMYL?" said the Prince. "Yes, I am" replied the Iman. "Well, your life is safe; you may keep your wives and treasure, but to-morrow I send you to St. Petersburg. Your fate will depend upon the will of the Emperor, my august master."

SCHAMYL bowed without uttering a word. The Prince then said to him, "I expected you at Tefiis; I thought you would have come to make your submission. As you did not, I was obliged to come and seek you here."

Turning then to Lieut.-Col. GRABBE, Prince BARIATINSKI said, "Start at once for St. Petersburg, tell his Majesty what you have seen and heard, I will send written details to-morrow and SCHAMYL with them."

This is the dénouement of the sanguinary drama which has lasted so long. But it is not quite over yet. There are many tribes in the Caucasus who still maintain their independence, but the capture of SCHAMYL will contribute greatly to their subjection.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS IN ASIA.

A letter from St. Petersburg in the London Times says:

"The railways now allow English merchandise to penetrate beyond the frontiers of Affghanistan without considerable augmentation of its cost, and to offer a dangerous competition to Russian produce in the markets of Bokhara and Khiva, neighbors of Russia. The Russian Government proposes to put an end to this state of things. It is a difficult enterprise to struggle with English interests, but there is no doubt that it may be accomplished. Russia has already begun to make the railroad from Moscow to Saratoff, and she is working actively for steam navigation on the Caspian Sea; the conclusion of the war in the Caucasus will now allow her to transfer the whole of her activity to Central Asia, the more so as the inhabitants of the Kirghese steppes and the Turcomans dwelling towards the South of the Caspian Sea have long sought her protection against Khivan oppression. She will find capital to construct the railroad from the Caspian to the Aral, will improve the navigation of the Rivers Amoor and Syr-Daria, which water those vast countries, and, by the construction of fortresses on the 264 versts which separate the Caspian from the Aral, will acquire a sovereign influence over the little States of Central Asia. Then the English trade with the Indies will be infallibly undermined. Europe, and England herself, will find a great advantage in trafficking with Central Asia by the route of Moscow and Saratof, rather than the long sea route round the Cape of Good Hope. The execution of this gigantic project had been already commenced, but the successful issue of the Caucasian war will powerfully contribute to its prompt realization. The political, territorial, and commercial extension of Russia towards the English Indies is henceforward irresistible.

THE LATEST NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH FROM LONDON TO QUEENSTOWN.]

MR. WARD AT PEKIN.

LONDON, Thursday, Sept. 29.

The Paris Pays, a semi-official journal, announces the arrival of the American Minister at Peking. He ascended one of the branches of the Pei-ho, accompanied by the members of his legation. They were not allowed to see anything of the country, and while awaiting an interview with the Emperor, were required not to leave the residence assigned to them.

Some fresh details have been given in a Paris journal respecting the projected expedition to China. The force is to consist of 12,000 men, chosen from the best men of every corps. It is certain that all the men of a regiment are not fitted to endure the climate. A dépôt to repair deficiencies is to be established near Hong Kong or Shanghai. The departure of the force cannot take place before the first fortnight of November.

AFFAIRS IN ENGLAND.

A deputation from the masons waited on the master builders yesterday. The interview is said to have lasted seven hours, and at its close was adjourned until this day. The result will have an important bearing on the strike.

The freedom of the City of Aberdeen was presented to Lord JOHN RUSSELL last evening, in the Music Hall. In the course of his address he declared that England would never, under his auspices, enter into a Congress unless the rights of the people to govern themselves without the interference of foreign coercion were recognized. He also touched on Parliamentary Reform, and concluded an eloquent speech by declaring that England held a beacon on high which might yet serve the rest of the world.

A movement is on foot amongst the merchants in trade with the Cape of Good Hope, having for its object the presentation of an address to Sir GEORGE GREY on his return from the colony.

Last evening a meeting was held at the Hall of Science to adopt measures for the total and immediate abolition of flogging in the army and navy. The chair was occupied by J. C. MURDOUGH, ex-member for Bridport.

The case of PATTERSON, a person implicated in the church riots of St. George's in the East was reopened this morning before Mr. YARDLEY, who decided upon sending it to the Session.

The Times says that the seizure of San Juan originated in audacity, and the assumption that England would be afraid to avenge it is time to put an end to.

Alderman CARTER has this day been elected Lord Mayor of London for the ensuing year.

ITALIAN AFFAIRS.

Prince NAPOLEON has arrived at Zurich.

Separate conferences between the French and Sardinian, and afterwards between the French and Austrian plenipotentiaries, have taken place.

The Dictator of Modena has given orders for the purchase of 30,000 Minié rifles, and also of the horses of the Piedmontese cavalry, which have been reformed.

A telegram from Naples announces that the King has left for the Roman frontiers, for the purpose, it was said, of having an interview with the Pope.

The Herald correspondent says that Austria and Piedmont are about making warlike preparations, and that the French army of occupation in Italy is about to receive reinforcements. The renewal of hostilities is apprehended by many.

The representative of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, at Rome, has refused to deliver up the Embassy House, although threatened with the confiscation of his own property in Tuscany. It is said he is supported in his refusal by the Ambassadors of France and Austria.

SPAIN.

The Spanish Government is said, by the Journal des Debats, to have declined the mediation of England in the dispute with Morocco.

The semi-official Journal of Madrid denies that a convention exists between France and Spain, relative to Mexico.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

LONDON, Thursday, Sept. 29.

The City Article of the Herald states that at Mark. lane the tendency to advance on Monday's price was visible. The average price of wheat in England and Wales, for the week ending Saturday last, was 41s. 10d., being a decline of only 1d. Since Aug. 20, the decline amounts to 2s. 3d. per quarter.

The Daily News City Article of Wednesday evening, Sept. 28, says:

"The funds remain without any movement of importance. Brititish railway stocks were weaker in the afternoon. There was a moderate demand for money. The best bills are taken at 2⅜ to 2⅛ per cent. The amount of gold taken to the Bank to-day was £29,000. The £243,000 by the Kent came to hand, but at too late an hour to be dealt with."

The Times' City Article of Wednesday evening says:

"The funds have been steady throughout the day at the firm prices of yesterday. In the discount market there is undiminished ease, and occasional transactions take place at 2¼ per cent. The advices from the Continent describe a general absence of speculative business, notwithstanding the superabundance of capital in each of the markets. At Hamburg the rate of discount was only 1½ per cent. In the railway market there has been a reaction, especially in the heavier stocks. The decline was from ⅛ to ⅝ per cent."

LONDON PRODUCE MARKET.

LONDON, Thursday, Sept. 29.

SUGAR excessively flat; the few lots sold were cheaper than yesterday. COFFEE steady; so far only 7,000 bags common Misore have been sold, at 82s.6d. to 100s. TEA quiet; common Congou 1s.5d. cash; about 13,000 packages for sale to-morrow. RICE steady. RUM firm. SALTPETRE quiet; latest sales of 8⅛ cwt., at 37s., and 65¼ at 38s.6d. TALLOW flat, at 57s.9d.@58s. on the spot, and 57s.6d.@57s.9d. for October and December.

The Health of the City.

In Tuesday's TIMES appeared an article under the heading, "The Health of the City." Permit me to make extracts from that article, with brief comments. You say that "The health of the City never was better than it is now." If this be strictly true, I am rejoiced to hear it, for in all conscience, there was great room for improvement; but an uncomfortable doubt arises of the truth of the above in the next line. Statistics are valuable or dangerous, in the ratio of their accuracy. The article says: "Of the one million—more or less—of the inhabitants of the Metropolis."—This will strike the statistician as a free and easy style of giving statistics. In 1830 the population was 202,589; in 1840, 312,710—increase, 110,121; in 1850, 515,394—increase, 202,684. From 1850 to 1855—5 years—a larger number of emigrants arrived in this City than in the previous 25 years. In 1855 the population was 629,810—increase 114,416.

Since 1855, emigration has rapidly declined; but suppose you add to the population of 1855 the ratio of increase of the previous 5 years, it gives you 737,226, as the population of 1860. I will wager you a year's subscription to your paper that the census of 1860 will show the population of this City not to be over 725,000. A quarter of a million, in an estimate of life and death, may not, in the opinion of the author of the article, be a matter of any moment, particularly so if he is to throw out of the bills of mortality any number of deaths he may choose, so that he may make the apparent ratio of mortality of this City come somewhat near that of other cities, in which they have medical men as sanitary officers. Book-keepers would call this "forcing a balance." Figures can be made to lie.

Further on the following extract presents itself:

"And yet when to the bill of mortality of the City proper we add the number of deaths which occur at Blackwell's, Randall's and Ward's Islands, and at the Hospitals and other institutions within the City limits, it is found that the proportional mortality of New-York thus estimated is greater than that of London only by a very small fraction."

This contains two gross and palpable misrepresentations—first, that in the Register-General's Report of the Metropolitan district of London, upon which the ratio of mortality of London is founded, does not include all the deaths that occur in all the institutions, both public and private, of London. Your contributor is either not posted upon the facts, or else he is indulging again in a "forced balance;" second, that the proportionate mortality of New-York is but a little greater than that of the city of London. To answer this, I have but to refer to the Reports of the "Register-General of England," and those of the "City Inspector" of New-York for the past twenty years. We find, on official authority, that from 1840 to 1855 the ratio of deaths have been one-third greater in this City that in the City of London; in other words, one person in every thirty of the inhabitants of the City of New-York, dies annually, while in London only one in every forty dies annually. Again the article says:

"Those who attempt to make the calculation or compare the mortality of New-York with that of other large cities, almost invariably do injustice to New-York; they always place the population at too low a figure, and the deaths at too high a figure. The last error has arisen from the defective classification and mode of reporting the deaths which has heretofore prevailed. As we have previously stated, the classification of the still-born under the same head with deaths from disease, under the old system, added greatly to the apparent mortality. This method of classification prevails in no other of the principal cities of the world. In London the still-born are neither registered among the births, nor recorded among the deaths; they do not appear in the tabular statement of the Register-General at all."

I would respectfully inquire at what date the Register-General's report ceased to give a tabular statement of the births, still-births and premature births throughout all England. The Register-General's report for 1850 showed that in all England the number of still-births for one year to be 18,014. In the City of London the number was, for the same year, 1,323. (See Report for 1850.) I suppose in future we shall see no more of still-births in the City Inspector's reports. I would suggest that if he should exclude all that die under one year of age, he would have still less trouble in bringing the apparent ratio of mortality of this City up to the standard of London, Paris, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, Washington or Providence. Let me ask in conclusion, is not your contributor's puff of the City Inspector's Department another of those shows for which that Department of late has become somewhat notorious? MEDICO.

BOSTON TOWN-TALK.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Friday, Oct. 7, 1859.

Even in the dull city one feels the dreamy influence of this most delightful season. A warm mist broods over the Common and the Public Gardens, and even the raw lands of the recently filled-up Back Bay are transfigured and glorified by the touch of the Autumnal enchanter. Further out into the country, amid the pleasant woods of Roxbury, or the green, shaven lawns of Brookline, the peaceful charm more fully works. How any one can labor on such days as these of this present week I cannot comprehend. I look on toiling gardeners and menders of roads with wonder. Nature invites repose. She smokes among the distant hills her calumet of peace. A delicious languor fills the air; not the relaxing languor of the hot midsummer, but a healthy desire for rest; a sort of tonic laziness—in short what one would feel after drinking a glass of Lotos and bitters.

In spite of the beauty of the weather, the few remaining swallows of the watering-places are migrating to their town nests. The blinds of Beacon-street houses are once more flung open, and their windows are again cheerful of nights. Mrs. Jenkins having shaken the sands of Newport or Nahant from her feet, recommences her daily pilgrimages down Washington-street, and her matutinal gossips with her neighbor, Mrs. Jones. She has brought up lots of scandal with her from the sea-side, and the two old social vultures batten, all day long, on damaged characters.

Boston may be denominated as an immense whispering-gallery. The one in St. Paul's Cathedral is comparatively a trifle. I often wonder if old DIONYSIUS—he of the stone-and-mortar ear—had not some hand in the construction of this acoustic city. Argus must have been a Bostonian, so was Fine-Ear, and I know that the tree with the talking-leaves grows on the Common. Everybody in Boston knows everything about everybody. When an individual has found a personality, he cackles over it as a hen over her first egg, and lets all his friends know of his good forture. I could, at any moment I chose, know what old Lucullus, the retired slaver who lives on Beacon-street—a most respectable man, Sir—had for dinner the day before. Most of my acquaintances keep themselves posted on all such interesting events. When young Gamma, of Harvard, was locked up in the Station-house, the night after the regatta at Worcester, accused, by the guardians of the night, of the appalling crime of intoxication, every soul in Boston knew it before the jailer had finished locking the door of his cell. Throughout the tortuous streets of modern Athens, myriads of unseen telegraphs continually work. Every citizen is an operator, and receives and disseminates intelligence with a rapidity that is inconceivable. Some time since I beheld in Cambridge-street a literary gentleman who had committed suicide in New-York a year before. You may remember that he left his house, to accomplish his awful fate, with an umbrella, a great-coat, and a portmanteau. I recognized the deceased instantly, but the deceased did not look as if he cared to be recognized. I did not, of course, dare to disturb the dead, and so passed on. I was probably the only person in Boston who knew either his appearance or antecedents, and until now—this happened six months ago—I never mentioned it. If a Bostonian had seen him, the poor devil would have been blown on in less than an hour, and perhaps hunted by a select pack of legal bloodhounds.

Apropos of nothing at all—Who the deuce is the New-York correspondent of that pleasing sheet, the Saturday Evening Gazette? What is the matter between him and the proprietors of "The Winter Garden?" Have they cut him off the free list, or has some play of his been rejected by the great DION? Something is wrong, for, although friends and private letters inform me that "The Winter Garden" has been a real success, the correspondent of the Gazette informs the Bostonians that "the public seem to take no interest in it," and that they "evidently think the enterprise has no stability." En revanche, all the other theatres come in for their share of puffs. Indeed, the general tone of the New-York correspondence of the Gazette is eminently suggestive of free lunches, hotel hospitalities, dinners with dramatic artists, and gratuitous boxes at the theatres. I would seriously recommend the Winter Garden people to look after this Evening Gazetteer. "A dinner in time will save nine" such damaging attacks as those terrific onslaughts that appear hebdomadally in the Saturday Gazette. By the way, en passant, let me remark that, although an industrious writer, this is the first time I ever used the word "hebdomadal" in any shape. It is a favorite word with penny-a-liners, and I have always avoided it. But the writer of the greatest integrity has his weak moments. I ask pardon of the shade of ALFRED for a sin against Saxon.

Art is at present in a flutter in Boston. Somewhere or other I once saw a grand picture which was called "The Dead Lion." I can't remember who painted it, but the subject impressed itself forever on my memory. Imagine a vast desert in the centre of the arid heat of Numidia. An endless plain of gold-red sand rolls away, until in the furthest distance, which seems but the beginning of a further distance, the interminable level mingles with a parched and fiery sunset sky. Very far away towards the right, bathed in a haze of quivering, reflected light that dims their outlines, stands a group of thirsty palm trees. They suggest no coolness, no shade, no beneficent gush of waters. They are drooping, fainting, sapless. In the immediate foreground lies outstretched in the hot sand an old lion, stiff and dead. The huge shag that hangs round his bleared and toothless head is knotted into great hairy lumps. His ribs show through his flanks, on which the tawny hair is worn away in large spots. His claws, extended in the last agony, are blunt and broken. One can see at a glance that this terror of the desert—this African Nemesis—has met with the saddest of all fates, that of outliving health and strength. Toothless, feeble, unable to obtain the food necessary to life, the poor old hero has wandered away into this desolate spot and died with a rattle in the throat whose roar once spread terror for miles around. But this is not all. Specks, black and of an outline like that of the traditional Cupid's bow, speck the whole sky. Some are so far away that they are almost undiscernible, others a little nearer, and some so close that one can catch their entire form. They are vultures. East, west, south, north, they have with their keen—which is it, scent or sight?—detected the presence of Death in the desert, and are hastening to hold their festival. Some have already arrived. One fellow is at work on old Leo's left eye. Another is deep in the mysteries of the poor fellow's empty stomach. Five minutes more and that hot sand will be black with the ill-scented birds.

This is what I meant by saying that Art was in a flutter in Boston. Leonine RUFUS CHOATE is dead, and Art is busy over his remains. The Eleemosynary Evening Scrip-Scrap contains in nearly every issue a list of artists that are about to commence, or have commenced, or have just completed a portrait, or a bust, or a photograph, or a medallion, or a lithograph, or a wood-cut, or a bas-relief, or a stereoscopic view, or a panorama of the dead lion. Every little brush and every little chisel in Massachusetts is at work. From all sides flock the painters and the sculptors to have their dig at the great RUFUS. It is well if such men as Mr. BALL, Mr. ROWSE or Mr. AMES make a bust or draw a head of the great orator. They are gifted in their arts, and the world is the better for their efforts. But when Smith, Brown, Jones, Robinson and Jenkins come wriggling over those grand remains, I cannot help thinking of that picture of the Vultures and the Dead Lion.

Apropòs of Art, Mr. BIERSTADT has just returned from an expedition to the Rocky Mountains with his portfolio full of sketches. Mr. BIERSTADT has, I believe, been a student at either Munich or Dusseldorf, and certainly, if I may judge of him by one or two specimens, is an artist of great promise. It would seem as if the adventurous character of Mr. CHURCH was contagious, for it is now fashionable for painters to travel in distant and dangerous countries. If professional travelers do not look out, they will be outdone by the brothers of the brush.

The great scull race for the championship will come off in the Charles River on the 19th inst. Those who are behind the scenes are certain beforehand that it will result, as usual, in the victory of Mr. ROBERT CLARKE, of Boston. Mr. CLARKE is the most elegant puller I ever saw. He is built for such work, being exceedingly long-armed and athletic. His stroke is clean and precise, and he always looks as if he had plenty of reserved strength.

Boston is also looking out for the Great Eastern, Capt. MURRAY, of the United States steamer Bibb, has been invited by the city authorities to go down the harbor in their steamboat, to take soundings, and should the result be favorable, doubtless the citizens of Boston will work hard to get the leviathan round here.

Opera and theatricals still maintain their sway, with the difference that theatricals are ahead. The opera, pecuniarily speaking, is a failure. In other respects it is satisfactory. "Geraldine" continues its astonishing run at the Howard Athenæum, and has been warmly greeted by literary people. The Faculty of Harvard College are to appear at the performance on Wednesday next, that being what is called "author's night," a custom of French origin. It is a novelty to find managers acknowledging that there is such a person as the author.

Mrs. BARROW and Mr. WARREN have been playing at the Museum in TOM TAYLOR'S piece of "Nine Points of the Law," which I believe failed in New-York. Mrs. BARROW was demonstrative and artificial, and Mr. WARREN was, as he always is, exquisitely neat and artistic. I know of no artist in his line on the American stage who is so easy, natural and finished as this gentleman. His Triplet in "Peg Woffington" was beautifully touching—the true comico-pathetic medley—but the stupid audience laughed in the middle of the tearfulest parts, because forsooth WARREN was a comic actor. Boston audiences are the worst I ever saw—the worst trained in theatrical matters. They have a shocking habit of rising en masse before the piece concludes, and rushing out into the lobbies. But I am lengthy, and perhaps a bore. May your shadow never be less. JACK ROBINSON.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

New-Hampshire State Fair.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

DOVER, N. H., Saturday, Oct. 8, 1859.

The Tenth Annual Fair of the New-Hampshire State Agricultural Society opened last Wednesday, Oct. 5, with great éclat, with fair skies and everything assuring the people of a gala time. State Fairs have become quite an institution, originating from New-England, and other States copying the Yankee idea and applying them to their fertile soils and magnificent lands. Considerable attention has been given for several months to the New-Hampshire State Fair, by the citizens of New-Hampshire, and Dover, especially, who have made it the prime item of talk, deed, agitation, and the end of everything, and to have such beautiful weather the opening day, was, indeed, encouraging. The site is in the southern part of the city, conveniently situated from the city proper, and everyway excellent.

New-Hamphire is a Granite State most surely, and strangers who visit its villages and towns are surprised that we are so thrifty—that we possess so many rich and valuable farms. The counties of Rockingham and Strafford, and that quarter of the State bordering on the Connecticut River, are especially fine.

The exhibition on Wednesday opened with flying colors, nothing of importance being done, however, until the afternoon, when there was an exhibition of horses, and afterwards of stock, with an evening meeting for the discussion of Agriculture at the Court-house. We spent considerable time in noticing the stock, and were surprised to find it much improved over last year. There were several fine stallions and quite a number of sprightly and beautiful colts. A stallion, one year old, weighing 750 pounds, owned by Mr. IVORY H. KELLY, of Madbury, was a beauty; and one pair matched colts, weighing 2,126 pounds, owned by Mr. D. H. COVELL, of Hanover, were a superior team, and only increased our admiration for that farmer who can raise such animals among the hills and stubble grass of the mountains. Of stallion, the Flying Arrow, of a chestnut color, owned by Mr. F. A. WEIR, of Walpole, was the finest, and in addition to his superior build and beauty, he is quite a "prince of the turf." Of cattle, the Hon. JAMES H. BUTLER, of Nottingham, presented a herd of beef and working cattle which were very fine. DAVID BUFFUM, Esq., of Walpole, presented his full blood Devon and Durham stock, which is said to be the best blood cattle of the species in New-Hampshire. Of sheep, Messrs. F. & J. A. SAWYER, of Salisbury, exhibited some heavy Merinos, which are only a part of a stock of 300. Of cows, D. D. PERKINS, of Newmarket, exhibited two Durham cows, one weighing 1,540 and the other 1,194 pounds, which are mammoth, and one pair of two-year old steers, whose united weight was 2,104 pounds. A heifer calf, owned by THOMAS H. CUSHING, Esq., of Dover, five and a half months old, was unsurpassed, weighing 656 pounds; quite a "giant" in the bovine family. Mr. DAVID TOWLE, of South Hampton, exhibited a pair of oxen six years old, whose united weight is 6,500 pounds.

In the mammoth tent were the fancy articles, of which mowing machines, vegetables, tables of fruit, embroideries, ladies' nick-nacks, patent beds, and other affairs were the major part.

The second day, Thursday, the exercises opened under favorable auspices, it having clouded up during the night and become quite windy, to the damage of all the tents and injury of many articles. The dust blew furiously over the city, but quieted off towards sunset. The first object of interest was the procession and escort, which formed at 7 o'clock, consisting of the Granite State Guards, of Great Falls, and the Fire Department of Dover and vicinity, some four or five hundred in number, with bands of music in harmonious abundance, making quite an imposing appearance. Some promiscuous trotting and exhibition of stallions took place, till a trot between "two Strafford County horses," making the heats in about three minutes and a half. Next came a Grand Trot for a purse, $75, one mile and repeat, to harness, between Ajax, the famous New-Hampshire stallion, and Flying Arrow, owned by Mr. F. A. WEIR, of Walpole. This race was quite exciting, and resulted as follows:

H. H. SMITH names g. s. Ajax.....1 1 1

LAW REPORTS.

Pleading—Multifariousness—Averment of Title.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, OCT. 13—BEFORE JUDGE NELSON.

Joel Nourse et al. vs. R. L. Allen.—This was a demurrer to the complainant's bill, which was filed to restrain the defendants from the infringement of several patents for improvements in a reaping-machine. The demurrer claimed that the bill was multifarious, in that it set up four distinct patents for as many different improvements, which are not limited to any particular machine, but intended to be used in all the variety of instruments of this class, while any or all of them may be omitted, and hence that the matters set up in the bill were distinct and independent, in which the defendant is compelled to unite different and distinct matters of defence.

A second ground of demurrer was that the bill did not set forth a complete title in the complainant to the several patents.

Held by the Court—That as the four patents called for separate defences, the objection to the bill on the ground of multifariousness, in a general sense, would seem to be well founded. But the bill charges that all four patents are infringed by the defendant's machine, and to this extent they are connected together, and the convenience of parties, as well as a saving of expense in the litigation, would seem to be consulted in embracing all the patents in one suit.

That the deduction of title in the bill was unnecessary. A simple averment that the title to the patents was in the complainant would have been sufficient, and such an averment is in the bill, in addition to the special title set forth.

Demurrer overruled, and defendants directed to answer.

The Scheidam Schnapps Case.

CONCLUSION OF THE ARGUMENT.

Udolpho Wolfe vs. Emile Goulard.—This cause came on again in the Supreme Court, before Justice INGRAHAM, at Chambers, and Judge G. Dean replied at some length to the argument of Mr. O'Connor. He contended that the complaint in the case was at variance with the points of counsel submitted to the Court. It was alleged in the complaint that Wolfe had invented the liquor, and language composing its name; but in the argument it was only pressed that Wolfe had the exclusive right to the trade mark, or name, designating his preparation, as he had first introduced it, as a term indicating an article in the market. The injunction, if sustained at all, must be sustained upon the allegations of the complaint. If, therefore, the complaint was now abandoned, and counsel were allowed to set up a new claim in opposition to the motion, the injunction must fall of its own inability to stand.

The counsel then submitted that there could be no property acquired in a name common to an article in the market in which dealers generally trafficked. The Supreme Court at General Term, had so decided. This was such a case. Scheidam Schnapps were known long before Wolfe made his money out of them. Guy Mannering, one of Walter Scott's novels, had made mention of schnapps, by putting the term in the mouth of Dick Hatterick, the smuggler, when he was disposed "to be civil," and treat his friends to a dram. The name was a common one, and, at all events, Wolfe had deprived himself of the right to claim it by putting his own name before the designation. Wolfe published to the world that no schnapps were genuine but Wolfe's Scheidam Schnapps. Now, the defendant did not propose to sell Wolfe's schnapps, but Voldner's schnapps, and counsel could not see that the nature of the article would be changed by the prefix of the name of a vendor, whether that name was Wolfe, Voldner, Brown, Smith or Jones.

He further submitted that the Court should not interfere in a private matter of this sort to aid either party. Neither of them did what they advertised to do—that they imported the schnapps. That was not true in either case. The parties compounded and diluted in this City, and then put forth the counterfeit as an imported article. Neither the schnapps of Wolfe or the defendant had ever been outside of this port, and neither of them could be taken out of sight of land without being sea-sick. For this reason the Court should not interfere to shield either party, or to protect either party from the other. They should be left to the chances of the game they had commenced, and with sufficient competition to make each at least improve his domestic manufacture, if he could not be prevailed upon to be honest, and import what he advertised as imported and genuine.

The argument of the counsel was frequently amusing and attracted quite an audience.

After argument the Court took the papers and reserved decision.

A French Row and a Slander Suit.

Auguste Ferran vs. E. R. L. Fanchere.—This is an action for slander, brought in the Common Pleas, and is now on trial before Judge DALY. The parties to the action were originally partners in the milk business in this City, and remained so up to the first of July last, when, as alleged in his answer the defendant was obliged to leave town on business for a few months. During this time, as he also alleges, the plaintiff allowed the partnership business to go to "ruin," and finally absconded with a pair of horses and a wagon belonging to the concern. These, it is alleged, he concealed in Pennsylvania, where they have since been found by the defendant.

Upon the defendant's return to the City, he found out what had been passing in his absence, and naturally enough was quite enraged; and subsequently, while spending an evening in Mercer-street, he met his quondam partner, and of course "hard" words ensued. The defendant called the plaintiff a "horse thief," and other equally offensive epithets, for which the plaintiff now brings suit claiming that his reputation had been injured, and his fame damaged, to the extent of $3,000.

The defendant, as intimated, set the truth of what he said as a justification. The case is still on.

The Erie Railroad and its Creditors.

James Brown and twenty others vs. The New York and Erie Railroad Company and others.—This was an application before Justice INGRAHAM at Chambers of the Supreme Court, by the creditors of the above road, Pepoon, Nazro & Co., whose claim was for the rolling iron of the Company's track—that the Receiver be directed to pay this claim. It was contended that the order appointing the Receiver contemplated the payment asked. The order appointing the Receiver, Mr. Marsh, directed him to pay all sums then due by the Company, or yet to mature, arising out of the furnishing of materials and supplies for running the road. Mr. L. R. Marsh for the plaintiff, claimed that the present proceedings came within the language of the order.

The motion was opposed by the Receiver on the ground that the order did not direct or contemplate the act. The mortgage bondholders were represented, and contended that the order did not mean what it said and claiming that the obvious intention of the order was to pay them and not the applicant in this instance.

Mr. Marsh responded that the only way to ascertain the meaning of an order, was by the application of the usual rules for the interpretation of language.

The Court took the papers and reserved decision. Immediately after the papers were handed up, Mr. Butler, who represented the second mortgage bonds, moved the former order be so modified as to make it exclude the present applicants, represented by Mr. Marsh.

Mr. Marsh objected to the modification until his clients were paid. His motion was founded on the order as it was, and it must remain the same until his motion was disposed of, and his clients had their money. When that was done, the changes and modifications might go on ad libitum. Decision reserved on this point also.

Mr. Butler for second mortgage bondholders; Mr. Marbury for fourth mortgage bondholders: Mr. L. R. Marsh for motion; Mr. Eaton for Receiver.

Court of General Sessions.

TRIALS FOR LARCENY, ASSAULT AND BATTERY, BURGLARY, &C.

The trial of Mary Graham for stealing sundry articles of silk and velvet from the store of Mr. Baldwin was resumed yesterday morning before the Recorder. The examination of the witnesses for the defence, with the summing up of counsel, occupied nearly the whole day. As it was clearly proved that the articles stolen were abstracted in separate parcels each less in value than $25, the offence was legally one of petit larceny only. In that degree the defendant was convicted. The Recorder remanded her for sentence.

Charles Horton pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery. On the earnest recommendation of the complainant, judgment was suspended, with the condition that the defendant would leave the City within a week, and not return for three years. His brother provides him with means to go to Australia.

A motion to quash an indictment against Emil Hyman "for burglary, and receiving stolen goods," was argued before the Recorder, on the ground that the defendant was charged with stealing the goods, and also with receiving the goods stolen, this being "a double averment." The Court reserved its decision.

The case of Frank McCabe was called by the District Attorney, an indictment having been found against him by the Grand Jury for an assault and battery on Mr. Thompson, editor of the Daily News. This assault must be fresh in the public recollection. Mr. McCabe was not present, and the matter went over till to-day.

The District Attorney having no other cases ready for trial, the Court was adjourned till this morning at 11 o'clock.

Decisions.

SUPREME COURT, CHAMBERS—SUTHERLAND, J.—John H. White vs. Samuel Martin.—Motion for attachment denied without costs, but with liberty to renew upon papers showing more particularly the time of service of the injunction on defendant, and showing that the arrangement he made with the tenant, if any was made subsequent to the service of such order.

Joshua R. Balme vs. Henry Worrebough.—Motion denied without costs.

Elisha Buckman vs. Henry W. Word.—The plaintiff's default in not proceeding before Referee on the 15th September, 1859, and the Referee's order dismissing complaint for that cause set aside, on payment by plaintiff of $7 costs of opposing this motion, the Referee's fees for that day, and the fees of the witnesses of defendant actually in attendance before Referee on that day, the plaintiff to take short notice of trial.

James Watt, Jr., vs. Archibald Watt and others.—The order or relief asked for cannot be granted on these papers. It would appear that there was no privity of contract between E. Tillinghaust and the Referee; that she made a distinct agreement with James, and has actually paid him all she agreed to pay him, and more than was payable in cash by James to the Referee. This motion must be denied, without costs, but with liberty to renew it, either against James or E. Tillinghaust, on other or further facts.

Amelia Ann Rutger vs. William H. Rutger.—I thing the taxable costs or the actural disbursements and expenses of the attornies for the plaintiff should be paid or tendered before the order to discontinue can be granted. The defendant, as husband, is probably liable for those costs and expenses.

INGRAHAM, J.—Samuel W. Sears et al. vs John Curtis.—Motion granted, costs to abide event, unless plaintiff stipulates to admit on the trial that the defendant did not fulfill his agreement with Adriance. If such stipulation is served in five days the motion is denied.

Flight of a Company of Slaves—Pursuit and Loss of Life.

From the St. Louis Republican, Oct. 8.

Recently, ten or fifteen slaves have been abducted from the neighborhood of Fredericksburgh, Madison County, Mo., and the event has stirred up considerable feeling in that part of the State. On Saturday, Sept. 17, three negroes belonging to D. M. Fox, and two belonging to JOHN M. GHOLSON, escaped and made tracks for Illinois. A large reward was offered for the recovery of the slaves, and a party was organized to go in pursuit of them. Believing the fugitives would proceed towards the town of Sparta, Randolph County, Ill., where there is a nest of Abolitionists and underground agents, the pursuing party went in that direction. On Monday night, the 19th, it being anticipated that the runaways would attempt to cross Gravel-Creek bridge, between Chester and Sparta, eleven men, duly armed, were stationed there to intercept them. The negroes, who had joined some of those who had previously escaped from Fredericksburgh, did make their appearance at the bridge, as had been expected. When they came up the white men rushed upon them, in order to surprise and secure them; but the fugitives were furnished with fire-arms, which they immediately began to use. A general melée ensued, in which one of Mr. GHOLSON's negroes was so badly wounded that he died in thirty-six hours, and it is supposed that two of Mr. FOX's slaves were slightly wounded. One of the party stationed at the bridge, named WEATHERINGILL, was arrested for the killing of GHOLSON's negro and conveyed to the jail at Chester where he was locked up to await trial. The news of his arrest greatly exasperated the citizens of Madison and adjoining counties, and a band of fifty or sixty persons was organized with the avowed design of releasing WEATHERINGILL from the Chester jail. They crossed over on Monday last, and their appearance in Chester excited the liveliest apprehensions. The Mayor of the city issued a proclamation, and called upon the inhabitants to assist in repelling any attack that might be made upon the jail for the rescue of the prisoner alluded to. A large number assembled, in which there were from thirty to forty armed with muskets and other weapons, but their appearance did not seem to deter the Missourians from their purpose. Everything indicated a scene of confusion, havoc and bloodshed, until Mr. Fox personally called upon the mob to disperse, and made a speech to them begging them to desist and return peacefully to their homes, leaving WEATHERINGILL in the hands of the law. The appeals of Mr. F. had the desired effect, and the meditated assault upon the county jail was abandoned.

Extra Genesee	5 40 @ 7 25
Inferior to choice Extra Missouri	5 25 @ 8 50
Extra Kentucky and Tennessee	5 30 @ 9 00

Southern Flour is less active, being generally held above the views of buyers. Sales have been reported, since our last, of 1,700 bbls., in lots, at $5 40@$5 70 for poor to good superfine Alexandria, Baltimore, Brandywine, &c., and $5 75@$7 25 for fancy to choice extra brands ₱ bbl. Canadian has been purchased to the extent of 200 bbls. extra, in lots, chiefly at $5 30@$6 50 ₱ bbl. Rye Flour is in less demand at $3 70@$4 40 for fine and superfine ₱ bbl. Corn Meal is inquired for at $4 10@$4 15 for Jersey and Pennsylvania, and $4 35@$4 40 for Brandywine, ₱ bbl.: Puncheons of Brandywine are now quoted at $20 50 each.

FRUIT—We have heard of sales of 2,000 boxes Raisins, at $2 40 for Layer, and $2 15 for Bunch, ₱ box.

GRAIN—Wheat has been sparingly purchased today, buyers anticipating a reduction in prices. Sales have been confined to 11,000 bush., including strictly prime White Michigan, at $1 42; choice Amber, do., at $1 27@$1 28; extra Milwaukee Club at a price to be determined by the disposal of the remaining portion of the boat-load; choice White Kentucky at $1 50; and good White Southern at $1 36 ₱ bushel. Corn has been in moderate request at about former rates. Sales 13,500 bushels, at $1 for old mixed Western, in store; 98½c. for white Jersey; $1 for yellow Jersey; and $1 for white Southern, ₱ bushel. Rye is dull and heavy at 88c.@89c. ₱ bushel. Sales, 2,500 bushels. Barley continues depressed, at 75c.@83c. ₱ bushel. Oats are in limited demand, including Canada at 44c.@45c.; Western at 43½c.@44½c., and State at 43c.@44c. ₱ bushel.

LUMBER—Has been in good request at uniform quotations. In Albany the State Fair, in the early part of the week, interfered with business. Within a few days, however, a fair trade has been reported. The Albany Journal remarks that "the receipts have been moderate, and during the ensuing week they will be greatly diminished by breaks on the canal. Hemlock is coming in moderately from the north, and prices rule firm. Of other descriptions of lumber the market is well supplied. Shipments have been large—more than three times the receipts. Vessels are scarce and much wanted, particularly for Eastern ports. Freights rule firm, with an upward tendency; in fact, yesterday, an advance of 12½ was obtained by a vessel taken up for an Eastern port. The receipts by the Erie and Champlain canals from the opening of navigation to October 8, in the years named, were as follows:

	Boards and Scantling, feet.	Shingles, M.	Timber, C. feet.	Staves, Pounds.

The reason why, is that by Nature's own process it restores the natural color permanently after the hair becomes gray; supplies the natural fluids, and thus makes it grow on bald heads, removes all dandruff, itching, and heat from the scalp, quiets and tones up the nerves, and thus cures all nervous headache, and may be relied upon to cure all diseases of the scalp and hair; it will stop and keep it from falling off; makes it soft, glossy, healthy, and beautiful, and if used by the young two or three times a week, it will never fall or become gray; then, reader, read the following, and judge for yourselves:

NEW-YORK, Jan. 8, 1858.

MESSRS. O. J. WOOD & CO.,

GENTLEMEN: Having heard a good deal about Prof. WOOD's Hair Restorative, and my hair being quite gray, I made up my mind to lay aside the prejudices which I in common with a great many persons, had against all manner of patent medicines, and a short time ago I commenced using your article, to test it for myself.

The result has been so very satisfactory that I am very glad I did so, and in justice to you, as well as for the encouragement of others who may be as gray as I was, but who, having my prejudice, without my reasons for setting it aside, are unwilling to give your Restorative a trial till they have further proof, and the best proof being occular demonstration, I write you this letter, which you may show to any such, and also direct them to me for further proof, who am in and out of the N. Y. Wire Railing Establishment every day.

My hair is now its natural color and much improved in appearance every way, being glossier and thicker and much more healthy looking. I am, yours respectfully HENRY JENKINS.

Corner Columbia and Carroll sts., Brooklyn.

LIVINGSTON, Ala., Feb. 14, 1858.

Prof. WOOD—Dear Sir: Your Hair Restorative has done much good in this part of the country. My hair has been slightly diminishing for several years, caused, I suppose, from a slight burn when I was quite an infant. I have been using your Hair Restorative for six weeks, and I find that I have a fine head of hair now growing, after having used all other remedies known, to no effect. I think it the most valuable remedy now extant, and advise all who are afflicted that way to use your remedy.

You can publish this if you think proper. Yours, &c., S. W. MIDDLETON.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9, 1857.

Prof. WOOD—Dear Sir: Your Hair Restorative is proving itself beneficial to me. The front, and also the back part of my head almost lost its covering—was in fact bald. I have used but two half-pint bottles of your Restorative, and now the top of my head is well studded with a promising crop of young hair, and the front is also receiving its benefit. I have tried other preparations without any benefit whatever. I think, from my own personal recommendation, I can induce many others to try it.

Yours, respectfully, D. R. THOMAS, M. D., No. 464 Vine-st.

The Restorative is put up in bottles of three sizes, viz: large, medium, and small; the small will hold a pint, and retails for one dollar per bottle; the medium holds at least twenty per cent. more in proportion than the small, retails for two dollars per bottle; the large holds a quart, forty per cent. more in proportion, and retails for $3 a bottle.

O. J. WOOD & CO., Proprietors, No. 312 Broadway, New-York, (in the great N. Y. Wire Railing Establishment,) and No. 114 Market-st., St. Louis, Mo.

And sold by all good druggists and fancy goods dealers.

J. GALL, PRACTICAL OPTICIAN, NO. 172 BOWERY, BETWEEN BROOME AND SPRING STREETS.—Mr. GALL asks the attention of the public to a new style of perspective ground glass of the finest flint, which, from their high polish and true ground, produce pure and improved vision. It is their perfect transmission of light that enables the wearer of these spectacles to prosecute the most trying labors of the eye without those distressing results which follow the use of other glasses. Adjusting spectacles to vision requires great judgment on the part of the optician. Many sights are injured and some totally lost for want of this. It is of the utmost importance to the public to have good spectacles and accurately applied. GALL has devoted his attention for twenty years, in America, to this branch of optics alone. His knowledge and experience in optical science will enable him to afford useful advice to persons of weak or diseased eyes, or defective vision, and to furnish them with glasses adapted to their respective cases, by which the eye may be benefited, and the injuries which frequently occur from injudicious and ill-adapted glasses may be avoided. A large assortment of spectacles and eye-glasses, in gold, silver, shell, fine steel, and other frames. Spectacle Glasses reset, and all kinds of optical instruments carefully repaired.

GOURAUD'S ITALIAN MEDICATED SOAP, it is well known, cures TAN, PIMPLES, FRECKLES, SALT RHEUM, BARBER'S ITCH, CHAPS, CHAFES, TENDER FLESH, &c., besides being the very best shaving compound ever invented. GOURAUD'S POUDRE SUBTILE uproots hair from low foreheads, upper lips, or any part of the body, safely and quickly, warranted. LIQUID ROUGE for pale lips and cheeks. LILY WHITE for flushed, red, and heated faces. HAIR DYE instantly converts red, gray, or light hair to a beautiful black or brown, without staining the skin. HAIR RESTORATIVE, for the hair to grow, and make stiff, wiry hair soft, glossy, and silky. Found at Dr. GOURAUD'S old established depôt, No. 67 Walker-st., near Broadway; Hayes, Brooklyn; Callender, Philadelphia; Bates, No. 129 Washington-st., Boston; and Druggists generally.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The City of Washington, from Liverpool on the 28th ult., and Queenstown on the following day, brings English journals and London telegrams one day later than those received by the Indian. The most notable intelligence is the confirmation of the report, by the Paris Patrie, that Mr. Ward had reached Peking. The Patrie states that our Minister was awaiting in the Celestial capital an interview with the Emperor, and until that took place, he and the members of his legation were required to remain in the residence assigned to them. In the affair of the San Juan boundary dispute, the London journals are unanimous, without an exception, in claiming for Great Britain the sovereignty of the island.

The steamer Catawba, at Savannah, brings Havana dates to the 10th inst. Sugar was dull. Upon the Catawba, the passengers by the Star of the West, were taken to Savannah.

The safety of the Quaker City, towed into Hampton Roads by the State of Georgia, will relieve a general and profound feeling of anxiety.

A meeting of prominent Democrats was held last evening at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, in obedience to the call of a Committee previously appointed. The object was to inaugurate a reform in the organization of the Democratic Party, so as to secure the selection of candidates for office who, by their intelligence, capacity and honesty, shall be fit to serve the public in positions of responsibility. Mr. Watts Sherman presided, and the Hon. John Cochrane, the Hon. John McKeon, Judge Bronson, and others, took an active part. A Committee is to be chosen to "confer" and "advise" with Tammany Hall with the view of securing the nomination of good men. The speakers disclaimed all intention of making war upon the existing organizations.

The especial and all-absorbing topic of town-talk yesterday was the celebration of the marriage of Mr. Oviedo, an opulent Cuban, with Miss Bartlett, a lady of this City. As the utmost pains had been taken by the parties intrusted with the arrangements to make the affair one of public notoriety, there was a vast throng present at St. Patrick's Cathedral, where the choicest seats had been reserved for the crême de la crême of Gothamite society; a middle region set apart for the less pretentious middle class; and the remainder of the sacred precincts consecrated to the mob. At noon, Archbishop Hughes appeared, followed immediately by the bridal group; and the marriage was solemnized according to the Roman Catholic ritual. Curiosity was abundantly gratified in the inspection of the wealthy bridegroom, and of his young and handsome bride, whose expensive parure had so long been the theme of exaggerated gossip. The married pair left for Boston in the evening.

The Board of Aldermen, last evening, adopted a preamble and resolution expressing regret at the death of Senator Broderick and sympathy with his relatives and friends. The City Inspector sent a communication to the Board of Councilmen last evening, stating that he had arranged to have all the streets in the City cleaned. A series of resolutions were adopted, regretting the death of Senator Broderick, and an invitation was received and accepted to review the Firemen on the 17th inst.

Another American "Twenty-two" has suffered defeat at the hands of the All England Eleven; although the playing on the American side has materially improved since the match at Hoboken. At Philadelphia it succeeded in running up a score of 154 in two innings. The All England Eleven made their score equal to this in the second innings when three wickets had gone down. It is said that the Eleven have had an offer of $5,000 made them to play a game of base ball in New-York before their return to England.

Tammany Hall Senatorial Conventions were held last evening in the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh Districts. Bernard Kelly was nominated in the Fifth, Richard Schell in the Sixth, and Richard B. Connolly in the Seventh.

The New-England Society met last evening for the purpose of listening to another appeal from Dr. Waddington, for aid in building a church in London, in memory of the Pilgrims. The speaker stated that all that he had yet received was about $3,000, and announced his speedy return. Remarks were made by Wm. M. Evarts, Esq., who presided, and by Drs. Adams, Smith, Storrs, and others, all of whom regretted that more had not been done. At the conclusion they decided to continue the committee for the collection of contributions.

The Stock Exchange was unsettled yesterday, and a further decline in prices made on the sales of most of the Railway Shares. New-York Central closed 79¼@80, against 80¾@¼ the afternoon previous. Money works steady for Discounts, and rather cheaper on temporary Loan. Exchange quiet. Only one mail will be made up on Saturday, as the Fulton, for Havre, will be laid up for repairs. Bills on London 110 for standard Bankers'.

The receipts exceeded the sales of Flour, and prices declined 5c.@10c. ₱ bbl. Wheat was inactive, though buyers had any existing advantage. Corn was quiet, yet steady. Groceries were in good request. Provisions were purchased to fair extent but at easier rates for Pork and Lard. Cotton was dull and heavy. Metals, Oils, Tallow and Candles were very moderately inquired for. Naval Stores attracted considerable attention. Whisky advanced slightly. Lumber was more sought after. The freight engagements were more extensive.

A New Pilgrim's Progress.—Capt. Corrie, late of the yacht Wanderer, is about to publish a full, true and particular account of his voyage in search of a slave-trade, with "developments involving the reputation of many public men of this country." Here is a glimpse into the Cabinet Noir with a vengeance. Expelled by the New-York Yacht Club, cast off by the President, repudiated even by a Georgian Secretary of the Treasury,—a martyr to his faith in the white man, and his fondness for the black, Capt. Corrie can hardly fail to look into his own heart when he writes, and to eschew soft phrases in dealing with hard facts.

Secret histories, in general, though delightful reading even when stupidly told, labor under this defect, that they are usually related by men who wish to magnify their own office, and so exaggerate the proportions borne by the incidents which they narrate to the overt proceedings of courts and governments. But it is a singular characteristic of Mr. Buchanan's Administration that it has been an Administration of mystery, almost beyond precedent. The real springs of the Presidential action, and the real course taken by the Government in a majority of instances, have been quite undiscoverable by any of the ordinary lights of political experience. On the question of the Slave-trade revival in especial, the attitude of Mr. Buchanan and Mr. Cobb has been to the last degree incomprehensible. If Captain Corrie can give us any authentic information on this subject, his book will have a value and a bearing of which the author himself can hardly be conscious.

The French Press.

The peace of Villafranca has, in various ways, embarrassed the Emperor of the French. First came the disappointment of the French people, that they were to have no more splendid victories, no more bulletins, no more glory. Then came the anger of the Italians that their country had not been cleared of the Austrians "from the Alps to the Adriatic." But per contra came the Amnesty—an act of policy, without doubt, but by no means lacking in magnanimity, carrying delight and joy to the hearts of thousands of exiles, victims of the Republic as well as of the Empire, and of their friends, and bespeaking a consciousness of strength and security worth more than thousands of troops to the safety of the Imperial throne. And, when this was followed by indications of lenity to the Press,—when it was announced that all the warnings given hitherto were to count for nothing,—that the sins of the past were all forgiven and forgotten,—and when the Minister in charge of the Press was changed, and a liberal, well-known friend of free discussion was appointed to that office, the conviction was universal in Paris that the millenium was at hand,—that the rigors of absolutism were to be abated, and French wit, French conviction, French genius were again to have free scope in the French periodical press. Nothing did more to restore public confidence in the Emperor than this indication of faith in the French people, as represented by their favorite organ, the newspaper Press. For there is no city in the world, New-York not excepted, where newspapers are so universally read as in Paris,—and the influence which they there exert is infinitely greater than in London, New-York, or any other capital.

All these hopes have been blasted by the recent article in the Moniteur, and the circular of the Duke of Padua, announcing that there is to be no change in the law of the Press,—that this law was not elicited by any temporary emergency, nor intended to meet any special crisis, but that its principle was a fundamental element of the imperial régime,—was essential to the idea of a strong Government based on universal suffrage, and was to be considered permanent,—subject only to such ameliorations as experience might lead the Government to consider safe. A few of the Paris journals endeavor to find in this latter clause grounds of hope for future freedom of discussion;—the most, however, detect the fallacy of all such expectations, and point to the maintenance of the principle of the law as fatal to everything like free and independent journalism in France under the present Government.

The Editors of the ablest and most influential Paris journals are not fanatics nor men of unreasonable expectations. They understand perfectly the necessity of holding the Press to a rigid responsibility, for they know its power in such a community as that of France too well to suppose for a moment, that any Government could maintain itself against such freedom of the Press as obtains in England or the United States. In both those countries, opposition to the Government means simply opposition to the party in power. It never menaces or calls in question the Constitution itself, or dreams of changing the fundamental basis of authority. No Press or party ever thinks of destroying monarchy in England or Republicanism in the United States. In France it is different. The whole struggle there touches the fundamental character of the Government itself. There are always five parties waging a contest,—polemical at the outset, but ready at the first opportunity to become one of force,—for sovereignty. The Imperialists, the Bourbonists, the Orleanists, the Moderate Republicans and the Reds,—each of these considers itself entitled to the supreme power: and when any one of them may be in possession, the other four are ready to combine against it. Absolute freedom of the Press involves absolute freedom of combination among these four parties for the overthrow of the other:—and the past history of France shows the absolute impossibility of having any fixed and stable Government so long as entire freedom of discussion, criticism and denunciation is allowed. The Paris Press does not expect it. It yields, willingly and gracefully, to the political necessities of the country, and assents fully to the necessity of a rigid and vigilant Government supervision.

But it does complain of the arbitrary character of that supervision. It complains that it never knows when it does offend the power which stands in place of law, until after the fact. It complains that, instead of being held to certain principles of action, it is subject to the caprice of an individual; that "the law" which governs it is no law at all, but the arbitrary judgment and whim of a single man. The thirteenth section of the Decree of Feb. 17, 1852, declares that "a journal may be warned, suspended, or suppressed," not for violation of a fixed, known law, but "by an executive or governmental act." The Press exists only at the will, and by the toleration, of the Government. And this is the principle which the Moniteur and the new Minister declare to be fundamental—inseparable from the Imperial régime, and permanent. The Press only asks that laws may be enacted prescribing what shall constitute offences against the Government—pointing out what they may, and what they may not, say and do—and committing the enforcement of these laws to the same tribunals which have cognizance of other crimes. They care not how stringent those laws may be;—they only ask that they may be definite and precise. Then if they offend against them, they will do it with their eyes open, and so make themselves justly responsible to their full rigor. But now they write and print wholly in the dark. The whim of the Minister, the indigestion of the Emperor, may consider that an offence to-day which was perfectly innocent yesterday. The Press does not live under the protection and supervision of law, but by the toleration and at the mercy of absolute power.

The refusal of the Emperor to relax this rule is the most marked indication, either of a sense of insecurity or of an arbitrary and tyrannica temper, which he has recently shown. It will do more than any other act to repress the rising confidence and favor of the most enlightened portion of the French people. So long as the Press is thus fettered, the intellect, the culture, the genius of France will be the enemy of the Emperor and his dynasty. If it is not safe to change the law, then the Imperial Government is weaker than we have supposed. If the Emperor from preference and choice continues to hold the Press in its present degraded and outlawed position, his individual temper is far more despotic than his friends and supporters have represented it to be.

English Military Abuses.

There was a tremendous attempt made to reform the organization of the English army at the close of the Russian War. A commission composed of Sir John MacNeill, the eminent civil engineer, and Col. Tulloch, an attaché of the War Office, one of the best statisticians in England, was solemnly appointed and sent out to the Crimea, to inquire into the causes of the wholesale destruction dealt out upon the English army before Sebastopol, horses as well as men, by famine, disease and exposure. They made an elaborate and careful report, in which charges of the grossest neglect and misconduct were brought home to Sir Richard Airey, the Quartermaster-General, Lord Lucan, the Commander of the cavalry, and Lord Cardigan, the second under him. The facts on which these charges were based, were unquestioned and unquestionable, and they made out a case which called for the instant dismissal of the accused from her Majesty's service. Unfortunately, however, they had, in the interval between the close of the war and the presentation of the report, been decorated with divers medals and orders. If the report was true, these honors ought never to have been bestowed, and ought instantly to have been revoked. They demanded a court of inquiry, on the ground that it was unfair to allow such an indictment against them to stand upon record without their having had an opportunity of answering it. A Court was accordingly appointed, composed, as they knew it would be, and as everybody else expected it would, of the personal friends and cronies of the delinquents. Sir John MacNeil was summoned to attend, but he treated the invitation with the contempt it deserved. He said he had made his report, taken the evidence on which it was based, staked his character on its veracity, and presented it to Parliament. If the persons whom it inculpated, wished to whitewash themselves, they should do it in their own way. It was no part of his duty to assist them. Tulloch, however, was a military man and a Government official, and could not escape so easily, so he presented himself. The proceedings which followed were as disgraceful as anything which has occurred in England since the days of the Star Chamber. Tulloch was bullied and browbeaten by Cardigan and Lucan in person. Lucan insulted and defied the members of the Court—interrupted and contradicted the witnesses when he pleased. Airey gave his own version of the whole affair, and so did the other two. No one cross-examined them, and no rebutting testimony was allowed to be called. Before all was over Col. Tulloch was prostrated by brain fever, brought on by anxiety, and in his absence a verdict was of course found exonerating everybody and applauding everybody, and the court and the criminals went up to London laughing over the farce.

The things proved against Cardigan on that occasion were gross military misconduct in taking his brigade into the wilds of the Dobrudscha on a useless reconnoissance with so little care and precaution that two thirds of the men returned dismounted, their horses having died on the march, in the course of ten days. Secondly, gross inattention to the state of his division in the Crimea, as shown in his living in luxury on board his yacht in Balaclava, while his men and horses bivouacked in the depths of Winter on the heights of Sapoune, five miles away, causing the loss of almost all the horses of the force. Lastly, he was convicted of the most scandalous insubordination and insolence to his superior officers.

In addition to all this, without any desire to "lash the aristocracy," we may mention that his private personal character is of a kind that does not bear examination. His licentious intrigues have for twenty years been the great scandals of English society. His conduct towards the officers of his own regiment has always been characterized by gross brutality, which has driven many of them from the service. Without ever having seen a shot fired in anger, he rose in five years by dint of money and interest from a Cornetcy to a Colonelcy, and finally, as a reward for his misbehavior in the Crimea, he was, soon after the Tulloch investigation, made Inspector-General of Cavalry. Now, to cap the climax, the Colonelcy of the Fifth Dragoon Guard, the best cavalry regiment in the English service, a sinecure worth only £1,000 a year, which, like the full colonelcies of all regiments, immemorial usage has reserved as a reward for superannuated and meritorious officers, has, in defiance of the indignant protests of the public and the Press, been bestowed on the same favored individual, of whom his best friends cannot say that his life is even decent, and whom all must acknowledge to be a worthless and unsafe soldier.

If the Ministry had ransacked the storehouse of jobs and abuses to find a weapon that Bright and the reformers might wield with effect, they could not hit on anything better than this appointment, as the next session of Parliament will show.

Nominations of Judges.—The Tammany Democracy, in their Judiciary Convention, on Wednesday night, passed a resolution indorsing the official ability and efficiency of Justice Roosevelt in the strongest terms; yet out of 110 delegates composing the Convention, only eleven voted for his renomination. If the resolution was anything more than a formality, why did they not act in the spirit of it? If Mr. Roosevelt has proved a good Jndge, why did they not renominate him? If he was good enough to be indorsed, why was he not also good enough to be reëlected? Complimentary resolutions are but words, and words cost nothing, we are perfectly aware, while a renomination involves votes and work and disappointment to other aspirants for the place. Still, Conventions should be less lavish of their compliments, or else prove the sincerity of them by corresponding acts.

All judicious and reflecting persons agree that the Judiciary should not be made either the sport or the prey of politicians,—that the doctrine of rotation, always of doubtful propriety, has no application to this class of offices, and that a Judge who shows himself competent, upright and efficient, should be retained in his place. It is only by acting in the spirit of this principle that the system of an Elective Judiciary can be rendered safe or tolerable:—because it is only thus that good men can be induced to take the places, or that bad men can be kept out of them.

We do not intend by these remarks to intimate that Judge Roosevelt ought to have been renominated. We believe the members of the bar, and all who have had much to do with our courts of law, concur in the opinion that he has not deserved the eulogy passed upon him by the Convention, and that their action was wiser than their words. By indorsing his judicial career and refusing to renominate him, they have left the motives of their action open to censure. On their own showing they have displaced him for political or for personal reasons—not on the only ground which would justify them in doing so, that of unfitness for the place.

Buchanan vs. Forney.

The telegraph vouchsafes us the information that the President contemplates instituting a suit for libel against the proprietor of the Philadelphia Press. Mr. Forney has not, for some time, been distinguished for the moderation and gentleness of his language in regard to Mr. Buchanan, and more than once his asperity has rather appalled those steady-going persons who never permit themselves to speak evil of dignitaries, nor listen complacently to the violence of others. All such offences, however, have been venial when measured by the latest of these effusions. On Monday, in the first heat of the tidings of the Broderick duel, Mr. Forney poured the vials of his combined grief and wrath upon the thinly-covered head of the President, charging the death of the California Senator to an atrocious conspiracy for the removal of all prominent dissenting Democrats, the chief deviser and framer of the plot being the President himself. In closing this rash and wrathy ebullition, the writer uses such immoderate terms as these:

"Thus has fallen the first great martyr to the political principles of the campaign of 1856! We ask the arch-traitor to those principles, if, in his old age, and in the sunset of his life, he can feel that his hands are clear of the heart's blood of David C. Broderick?"

It is at these words, we are told, Mr. Buchanan stands aggrieved; and to refute them—or, in other words, to wash his hands of the blood in question—he proposes a resort to law.

Of course, there is no conceivable reason, abstractly considered, why a President in such emergencies should not sue and be sued as fluently as the simple citizen. It is, unhappily, not given him to warn the Press, as he might were he Emperor of the French; or to dismiss his assailant to Siberia, as he doubtless would were he Emperor of all the Russias; or to have the libeler impaled, as the Emperor of all the Celestials would certainly do in like circumstances. Being no Emperor, but that forlorn and defenceless thing, a President, he has to choose between the sufferance, which is the badge of his tribe, or such trivial means of redress as custom and law afford him.

Who shall chide him for electing the latter? Men can bear impatiently the goads and spurns of embittered personal enmity, but when the victim is so loftily placed, when the assaults are in the intense nature of lèse majesté, when there are no lightnings for irate Jove to hurl at his foe, no chains to bind the daring reviler to the rock, no vultures to rend him there—then, in the name of suffering humanity, let Jove descend to merely mortal means. Mr. Buchanan is the highest authority for what is due to his own dignity, and has also, we doubt not, estimated the danger he encounters in accepting the newspaper charge so seriously, that the world may suspect there may be some trace of truth in language that must otherwise have passed as the effusion of a rash and angry mood. If so, let the suit of Buchanan vs. Forney proceed; and should the President conduct his cause in person, we may deem the subject of sufficient moment to oblige us to detail a special verbatim reporter to chronicle the trial.

Concert.—The concert given by Mrs. Stagg last night was a complete success. Niblo's spacious Saloon was densely crowded. The laudable object contemplated by the beneficiare will, we trust, be measurably accomplished. Mrs. Stagg is an exceedingly pleasing singer, and could easily and speedily become a public favorite. Her voice is a contralto, of good quality, but weakened and made tremulous by parlor usage. The lady was assisted by Mr. Perring, Signor Rocco, Mr. Saar, (piano,) Mr. Anschutz, and an orchestra. The programme was of the proper length, and the entertainment in every respect a pleasant and triumphant one.

PERSONAL.

The Rev. Dr. Cahill is about to visit the United States. In a letter to the Rev. P. Cuddihy, of Milford, Mass., he says that he shall leave Ireland on the 22d or 29th October, and adds: "I intend to make the tour of the States, and of Canada, to see my countrymen, to inform myself, as an eye-witness, of the flourishing institutions of the American Republic, to transmit to the poor Irish at home a weekly report of the condition of their relatives and friends on the other side of the Atlantic, and to point out those parts of the Union where labor is most rewarded, and where a settlement is most advantageous."

Mr. John Bardoe Elliott, a well-known oriental scholar, formerly of the East India Civil Service, has presented to the Bodleian Library a very valuable collection of Persian manuscripts, upwards of a thousand in number, consisting partly of the bulk of the library of the late Sir Gore Ouseley, and partly of private purchases made during the last half century in India. All the manuscripts are in an excellent state of preservation, and are perfect specimens of caligraphy, as well as fair samples of Persian literature.

The ship Sheridan, at Boston from Leghorn, brings four pieces of marble statuary from the studio of Miss Louisa Lander, at Rome. The pieces are as follows: Bust of the late Gov. Christopher Gore, ordered by Harvard University; bust of Nathaniel Hawthorne; Statuette of Elizabeth of Siberia; statue reclining, nearly life size, of Evangeline. Miss Lander has been passing the Summer at St. Petersburg, and returns to Rome in the Autumn to complete some works on hand.

Jerome Thompson, the artist, is engaged in painting a villa scene up the Hudson, in which he introduces, in the foreground, in his usually happy manner, the owner of the villa, and the several members of his family, all of which are said to be excellent portraits.

Mr. F. Avery, who goes to survey the Atrato route, was, on the departure of the North Star, at Aspinwall. He was expected to leave on his expedition in about ten days.

Mr. Kirkland, a commissioner from San Juan del Norte is expected to arrive in the Northern Light, due here in about a fortnight. He will visit Washington as soon as he arrives.

Blondin received the present of a gold medal from his friends at Niagara Falls a day or two ago. The presentation ceremonies wound up with a supper given at Blondin's expense.

Notwithstanding the great depression in freights for the last three or four years, and the various losses that most ship-owners have sustained, there have been built in Maine this year one ship of 1,500 tons, two of 1,400 tons each, one of 1,350 tons, two of 1,100 tons, two of 1,150 tons, five of 1,050 tons, four of 1,000 tons, five of 950 tons, one of 900 tons, four of 850 tons, two of 800 tons, three of 750 tons, four of 650 tons—in all, 36 ships, measuring 35,000 tons. There are also building 12 barks, that will average 400 tons each, besides some 15 to 20 single-deck barks.

A murderer, Erastus J. Hague, just convicted at Raleigh, N. C., for killing S. H. Parrish, made a speech to the Court when called up for sentence, declaring that "he was an innocent man; that he had not had a fair trial, and that if he had had one hundred dollars when the trial took place he would not now be in his present situation;" concluding with the quotation from Patrick Henry: "Give me liberty, or give me death.

THE MARRIAGE OF THE SEASON.

The Nuptials of Don Esteban Santa Cruz de Oviedo and Miss Frances Amelia Bartlett.

REMARKS OF ARCHBISHOP HUGHES.

Mrs. Browning's fantastic vision in Aurora Leigh of the meeting of St. Giles and St. James at a wedding, was in a manner realized yesterday morning, at the Roman Catholic Cathedral in Mott-street, in this City. For most practical purposes, Mott-street is just about as far from Fifth-avenue and Fourteenth-street as the Coast of Africa, and the African element so completely preponderates in the street as to make the image singularly accurate. The artistic mind will therefore recognize at once the admirable fitness of such a locality for bringing out in the highest and most brilliant contrast the fabulous splendors of a bridal ceremony, strictly Caucasian, not to say Circassian, in character, and conducted with a sumptuous disregard of conventional rules only to be paralleled in such creations of Oriental genius as the tale of Noureddin and the Fair Persian, whom he bought for an incredible price and loved without any assignable limit. The nuptials of Señor Don Esteban Santa Cruz de Oviedo with Miss Frances Amelia Bartlett, daughter of that distinguished ex-officer of the American navy Mr. Washington Bartlett, mark indeed an epoch in our social history. The premonitory symptoms of this memorable occurrence have enlivened for months past the dull current of contemporaneous affairs. We need hardly recall to our readers the particulars of the many warm and vehement controversies which have been waged in the columns of divers leading journals, over the personal characteristics of the bridegroom, his age, the size of his whiskers, the amount of his fortune; over the trousseau of the bride, the number and quality of her robes; the exact value of her jewels, ranging from the enthusiastic magnificence of $600,000 to the disdainful and depreciatory triviality of a few beggarly diamonds and pearls. In fact it may well be doubted whether the completion of a comprehensive system of matrimonial engagements which should unite all the bachelors of New-York on one happy day to all the spinsters of New-Jersey would provoke more general or more ardent attention from the enlightened public and the enlightening Press than has been excited by the widely disseminated rumors of the betrothal of Señor Esteban Santa Cruz de Oviedo, millionaire in partibus, to Miss Frances Amelia Bartlett, belle at Washington, Saratoga and other lands and localities.

All things must culminate at last, and high noon of Thursday, the 13th of October, was eventually designated for the ripening of this notable matter; St. Patrick's Cathedral selected for the scene of the ceremony, and the Most Reverend the Roman Catholic Archbishop of New-York nominated to the august duty of performing the solemn rites of the occasion. There remained, however, a grave problem to be solved. Popularity has its penalties as well as its pleasures, and the immense interest taken by several hundred thousand persons of both sexes in the welfare of Señor Oviedo and his fortunate bride made it necessary to devise some means of conciliating comfort with glory on the auspicious day. The Cathedral, in Mott-street, is hardly so large as St. Peter's, at Rome. Mott-street, itself, is less ample than Broadway, and as Fourteenth-street, with Ehe Avenue, was of course to be summoned to the fête, something must be done to secure them a way of approach to the sacred edifice, and room within its walls when there. The services of the police force were put in requisition, and the Superintendent-General, Mr. Pillsbury, consenting to usurp for a while the functions of the imperishable Brown, of Grace Church, combined a plan of operations, the excellence of which was abundantly vindicated by the triumphant result. The Cathedral in Mott-street has, of course a vestry, which vestry communicates most felicitously by a door in the rear of the building with Mulberry-street. The invited guests of the occasion were accordingly divided into two sections, to one of which tickets of a celestial blue, admitting the bearer from Mulberry-street through the vestry, were distributed, while to the other cards of a non-committal white were issued, passing them into the church by the Mott-street doors. The significance given to the blue cards was, no doubt, meant as a graceful compliment to the nationality of the bridegroom—the blue blood of Spain, as is well known, marking the more aristocratic orders of the ancient Gothic monarchy. The pews in front of the cathedral aisles, to the depth of some twenty or thirty feet, were partitioned off for the reception of the azure multitude, as it were in the manner of orchestra stalls. The candidati, or white-card-bearing guests, thronged behind this partition in such numbers at a very early hour, as, from time to time, seriously to menace, by their surging impatience, the stability of the frail barrier which alone stood between the nuptial solemnities and a scene of promiscuous social amalgamation from the thought of which every well-regulated mind must recoil in horror.

Mott-street and the region thereabouts swarmed at "the top of the morning" with excited crowds of parti-colored citizens of both sexes, and the ordinary occupations of the population were neglected, in their resolute determination to lose no glimpse of the elegant invaders, the report of whose advent had penetrated the remotest corner-shops, and disturbed the most placid cellars of the vicinity. The elegant invaders, and especially that portion of them which marched under the white flag, were not long in coming. For seats in the Cathedral were only to be secured by preëmption, and the principle of Squatter Sovereignty was the order of the day. Before 11 o'clock the body of the cathedral presented a scene of scrambling, shoving, clamor, crinoline, fans, fever, expectation, despair and hope, not to be surpassed in the Sistine Chapel where Allegri's Miserere never is, but is always "to be sung." Long before that time too, were the narrow roadways of this remarkable region blocked like the lanes leading to a battle-field, with horses, vehicles and angry officers. The clash of coal-carts with carriages, of beer-vans with broughams in these perilous defiles, was vast, universal and appalling. It is really highly creditable to the police that no serious accident should have occurred to blacken the brightness of the day; nor is it less creditable to the "good society" of New-York, that we have heard of no arrests made for profane swearing, to which a perpetual series of temptations was offered.

As the hands on the dial neared the eventful stroke of twelve, a perceptible agitation pervaded the dense masses of the audience. Several amiable and rather corpulent priests ambled hurriedly in and out the little doors on either side of the altar, a mysterious bell or two tinkled in the distance, opera-glasses came into requisition in all parts of the house, and a few impassioned persons in the aisles got themselves severely snubbed by their intimate friends, the other invited guests, for threatening small stampedes towards the front, which was kept with masterly discipline by half a dozen good-looking "stars" posted on the steps of the chancel.

The "shameless noon" had hardly clanged from all the steeples and ticked on a thousand watches in the pockets of the respectable company, when the Archbishop of New-York, followed by his religious suite, entered the chancel to the pealing of the organ, and submitted himself to the ceremony of robing his portly form in the splendid habiliments appropriate to his rank. In the twinkling of an eye he flashed from violet into white and gold, his person rustling with heavily-embroidered satin, and on his head the towering golden archiepiscopal mitre nodding sublimely. He also wore a pair of gold spectacles, and supported, like Moses of old, on either hand by a goodly Aaron and Hur, one of whom bore his colossal gilded crozier, while the other carried a golden aspersoir, or sprinkling-pot, of holy water, advanced to the chancel railing, there to meet the bridal party, which had entered immediately after him, and for profane eyes had somewhat extinguished the brief ceremonial within the chancel. The bridegroom led the way, his lady-mother-in-law elect leaning downward with dignity upon his elevated arm.

Señor Oviedo walked with a firm step and composed countenance, and his hair was most accurately arranged. His waistcoat, we believe, was made of white satin, and his cravat of point lace. His pantaloons and coat we are sure were of a rich jet black in color, and probably made of Biola cloth. The lady mother-in-law—but why detain our readers from the bride, who floated on behind, upon the arm of her father? This lovely cynosure of all eyes evidently did not fear the public gaze, nor needed to fear it. Her dazzling complexion was toned down by the delicate shadow of a splendid veil of Brussels point lace, caught up about her oval head by a wreath of orange blossoms, almost bursting into flower. Flounces of Brussels point, two in number, "deep as first love," mystic and wonderful, adorned her white silk robe, born of the genius of Genin. About her neck, itself a pearl, she wore four rows of shapely orient pearls, looped into a festoon by one slight rib of gleaming diamonds, gathered into the likeness of a knot of love. From this knot depended a single pear-shaped pearl, dipped in diamonds of surpassing lustre and beauty.

"The tip no jewel needs to wear,
The tip is jewel to the ear,"

this bride wore two pendant ear-rings formed of diamond solitaires of great splendor, supporting pear-shaped pearls of proportionate value, capped with brilliants. A brooch, one living Kohinoor mountain of light, reposed upon the quiet of a satisfied heart. This enviable ornament was all diamonds and pearls, the briolette diamond which forms its pendant being regarded by Messrs. Tiffany & Co., by whom the whole parure was imagined and created, as the most unimpeachable single stone in America for beauty and price. The workmanship of all these decorations is truly poetic. Assuming the diamonds to represent the manly constancy of the groom, and the pearls the modest loveliness of the bride, the cunning artificer has so contrived his work that, throughout all the parure, diamonds support pearls, and pearls confine diamonds, no obtrusive gleam of gold or silver appearing in the ornaments of the bride, as none of course appears in the union which binds her to another loving heart.

After these chief actors in the scene, a cloud of vague perfumes pervading all the azure space ushered in six beauteous maids, as many gallant men, the attendants of the happy pair. The beauteous maids, all translucent tarlatane and tender truth, floated to the left, the gallant men—chiefly Cubans, and occasionally more extravagant in their attentions to the audience than in their reverence of the altar—ranged themselves on the right; the bride and bridegroom went forward to the presence of the prelate—the father and mother took their places immediately behind, the father manifesting so much emotion as compelled him to hide his face in a fine white handkerchief,—the mother, with a more Roman calmness, supporting her daughter in the trying ordeal by her own example; and the ceremony began. The spectators, and especially the great hive of white ants in the rear, now manifested so much eagerness to catch what was going on, as made the service almost as much a dumb-show to the great majority of those present as it must have been to the bridegroom, who is understood not to be a perfect master of the English tongue. Nevertheless, the service was duly performed, the rites were duly done; the holy water was duly sprinkled on the happy pair, and they twain were made one. This being accomplished, the Archbishop took up his crozier and his parable together, settled his spectacles, and availing himself of the opportunity afforded by the numerous and variegated assembly before him, addressed the wedding-party and the world for half an hour on the doctrine of Discipline and Divorce, and other appropriate subjects, with his usual felicity and force. He spoke to the newly-married pair of the new relations into which they had entered, and their consequences; of the distinction between marriage as authorized and approved by the Catholic Church, and marriage performed without religious sanction, and merely as a constitutional or human contract; of the origin of marriage as instituted by God and entered into by our first parents previous to the fall of the race. He said,

"This institution was the only one that had survived the fall of man, and all the calamities which man's iniquity had brought upon him. In reference to the importance of Christian marriage in its relations to society, he said the Church, while she certainly did not refuse to recognize a covenant between two persons who were free to enter into this covenant in the human or civil order as a binding contract, considered merely in a legal light, nevertheless held that covenant to be also a divine as well as a human contract. She held that God was the author of marriage; that He was the protector of its rights; that He was the avenger of its violations; in short that the Son of God on earth had raised this originally divine institution to the rank of a Sacrament, which was much more awful and mighty than any mere civil contract could be. As a Sacrament it had been appointed as a means to communicate grace to the parties for a faithful and Christian discharge of the obligations which it involved. The Archbishop next spoke of the antagonism of the world and the Church with regard to the indissoluble character of Christian marriage. The Church had ever maintained that no power on earth could dissolve a Christian marriage once validly contracted. On this point she had resisted kings and emperors and principalities and powers from her very origin. She would maintain her creed on this head though it drove twenty Englands from her communion. The Archbishop said, Christian marriage furnished to the well-being of society an indispensable safeguard. It was at the basis of all that was pure and honorable and decent and dignified in the family and in society, which was composed of families. Hence society was wounded to the quick when Sovereigns, or Legislatures, or Judges undertook the forbidden task of separating, in the very words of the Saviour, "what God hath joined together." Those who initiated this theory adverse to the words of Christ himself, did not foresee the consequences to which it would lead. The privilege of divorce was an encouragement to discontent in the married life, and it had not been barren of results. Indeed, it had made such progress that in our day Humanity itself was shocked at the wide range which was taken on this subject of matrimony. Degraded speculations were thrown out in newspapers, and it was said that even females who were raised from hereditary degradation only through the sanctity of holy marriage, now took part in discussions with regard to it, as if they, too, wished that matrimony should descend to a lower grade; so as to permit the parties making a contract to revoke their consent and dissolve the union at their option. To all of this the Catholic Church was, and ever would be, opposed, no matter whether advocated by Kings or by Peoples, by Henry of England, or Napoleon of France. She, at least, would stand by the dignity resulting from the divine origin, and the elevation given to marriage by God in the Garden of Eden, and by Christ in his life upon earth. The Archbishop next touched upon an idea that was scarcely worthy, he thought, of reflecting minds, that in certain cases, where the parties about to be married were of different creeds, there should be a double marriage, performed according to both rituals. This idea, he thought, was beneath the dignity of Christian matrimony. It must strike any one who reflected for a moment as a flagrant absurdity, since, if this notion was correct, half a marriage might be performed on one side of the street, and if the other half was left unperformed on the other, the couple would be only half married. Marriage was a single act, and when completed, required and could receive no second performance. In conclusion, the Archbishop reminded the bridegroom of the magnitude of the trust that was now committed to him; of his rights and duties in the married state. He warned the bride, too, of hers. To both he spoke of the trials of the married state, and advised them above all things to let Religion be their polar star. That they might be as happy as God ordinarily permitted married people to be, was the secret prayer of the many friends that surrounded them. It was his prayer, too, and it was the benediction which he invoked upon them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost."

Thus warned against any imitation of King Henry VIII. or Napoleon I., and encouraged with the reasonable hope of an average conjugal happiness, the bridegroom was then dismissed; the bride turning to the audience, gladdened a thousand eyes with the spectacle of her unruffled beauty as she embraced, one after another, her parents and her bridesmaids, shook hands with her groomsmen, and retiring through the vestry, took carriage for her paternal home in Fourteenth-street. The crowd, blue, white, black and gray, dispersed itself as best it could. Mott-street saw the vision of love and luxury fade from its battered and seedy precincts as suddenly as it had arisen; the disappointed wonder-seekers departed, and the interest of the day, dying gently out through three hours of Brown, polic

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

KANE MONUMENT ASSOCIATION.—A regular meeting of the Kane Monument Association was held on Wednesday afternoon at the law office of JOHN H. WHITE, Esq., No. 169 Broadway. The attendance of members was full. The report of the Lecture Committee was read. The Committee have engaged as Lecturers, Dr. CHAPIN, G. W. CURTIS, W. H. C. HOSMER, Prof. MITCHELL, BAYARD TAYLOR, Drs. FRANCIS and the Rev. Drs. HAWKS and CUMMINGS. On motion of Dr. FRANCIS, it was resolved that in the event of Mr. EVERETT's declining to deliver his Lecture either upon WASHINGTON, WEBSTER or FRANKLIN, Captain LYNCH, of the United States Dead Sea Exploring Expedition, should be invited to deliver the Introductory Lecture of the Course. A communication was received from the Mendelssohn Society, offering their services to the Association. The offer was accepted, and the Society will sing an Ode dedicated to the memory of Dr. KANE. Mr. THOMAS HICKS, Chairman of the Monument Committee, reported that the design for the monument was nearly completed, and that the cost of the structure would not exceed $13,000. An animated debate sprang up on a proposition to invite Mr. WENDELL PHILLIPS to lecture before the Association, upon the "Lost Arts." The tendency of the discussion was in opposition to Mr. P., for his allusions to the statue o WEBSTER, made in a recent lecture. The Association expressed itself as opposed to having anything political connected with the organization. The proposal was voted down, and the Association adjourned until Wednesday evening next.

ANNUAL SESSION OF THE SONS OF TEMPERANCE.—The Eastern New-York Grand Division Sons of Temperance completed their annual session, which was held at Columbian Hall in this City, yesterday H. A. GUILD, G. W. P. of Waterford, presided, and there were 160 delegates present—a larger number than has attended any session during the last six years. The reports from the various lodges, of which there are between 50 and 60 in the division, were very encouraging, and exhibited a large addition to the numbers of the order during the last few months. The following gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing year: G. W. P., JOHN N. STEARNS, No. 116 Nassau-street, New-York, of Greenpoint lodge No. 99; G. W. A., Mr. E. MACDONOUGH, of Harmony No. 5, New-York; G. S., J. DAVIS, of Eureka No. 187, Williamsburgh; G. Treasurer, Mr. H. ARMSTRONG, of Harmony No. 5, New-York; G. Chaplain, SILAS METCALF, of Eureka No. 187; G. Con., S. D. STILLWAGGON, of Flushing No. 8; G. Sen., M. BINGHAM, of Brooklyn No. 13. The quarterly sessions will be held in January, at Brooklyn; in April at New-York; and in July at Sandy Hill, Washington Co.

PUBLIC RECOGNITION OF THE ANTIOCH BAPTIST CHURCH.—The Recognition Services of the Antioch Baptist Church, in the Seventh-avenue, near Twelfth-street, took place last night before a large congregation. In July last a difference occurred among the members of the North Baptist Church, corner of Christopher and Bedford streets, which led to the secession of the minister, the Rev. J. QUINCY ADAMS, D. D., and about eighty members. A month since the Antioch Church, previously belonging to a Reformed Dutch congregation, was purchased for $30,000, and last night the recognition sermon was delivered. The opening prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. WESTON, after which the Rev. Dr. HAGUE preached from the text—Hebrews, chap. vi., v. 1—"Let us go on unto perfection." The Right Hand of Fellowship was given by the Rev. ROBT. LOWRY, and the closing services were performed by the Rev. Dr. ARMITAGE. The pastor of the church, the Rev. Dr. ADAMS, is a favorite of the congregation, and there are already 150 members in communion.

A NEW SPECIES OF FORGERY.—Two men called at the store of Messrs. HOYT, BOGERT & DILLON, No. 39 Fulton-street, on Tuesday, selected goods to the amount of $278 50, and a few hours subsequently sent a messenger for their purchases, who tendered the firm what purported to be the certified check of ROBERT CRAIG, Jr., for the amount. The check was drawn on the East River Bank, and the name of Mr. P. FIELDINGS, Paying-teller of that Institution, was stamped upon it in the form of a diamond—making a fac-simile of the certifying stamp of the Bank. When it was presented for payment, Mr. FIELDINGS immediately pronounced his signature to be a forgery, and said that no person named ROBERT CRAIG, Jr., kept an account in the Bank. Messrs. HOYT, BOGERT & DILLON thereupon were obliged to admit that they had been swindled. Messrs. MAY & LEWIS, another mercantile firm of this City, have also lost $205 worth of goods by a similar trick.

A BOARDING HOUSE RUNNER STABBED.—Yesterday afternoon, a number of boarding house runners went on board of the bark Golden Age, lying off of Castle Garden, to obtain patronage. While on board the vessel a dispute arose between two of them, named SKILLETTS and CHARLES MORRIS. SKILLETTS attempted to push MORRIS over the side of the vessel, and MORRIS returned the compliment by slapping SKILLETT's in the face. The latter immediately drew a dirk knife and attempted to stab MORRIS in the stomach. As SKILLETTS made a thrust with his knife, MORRIS jumped aside, but the weapon entered his left thigh, inflicting an ugly wound nearly three inches in depth. SKILLETTS was arrested by the Harbor Police and locked up, and the wounded man was taken to the New-York Hospital, where his wound was dressed by Dr. FISHER. The wound, though serious, will not prove fatal.

ARREST ON A CHARGE OF RAPE AND MURDER.—Wednesday afternoon, an Irish laborer engaged in the Central Park, was arrested on a charge of having been concerned in a rape and murder, perpetrated some weeks since in Clyde, of this State. A gentleman from Clyde, in passing through the Central Park, had his attention attracted to FEE's countenance as being a familiar one, and immediately recognized him as being one of the three implicated in the affair alluded to. He accordingly informed the Police, and yesterday, Officer LOWERY, of the Twenty-third Precinct, arrested FEE. The sheriff of Wayne County was also immediately telegraphed to, and replied that FEE was undoubtedly one of the criminals. The accused is locked up at the Fourteenth Precinct Station-house, and maintains an obstinate silence, refusing to give any details respecting the affair.

FIRE IN WEST TWENTIETH-STREET.—About 7½ o'clock, last evening, a fire was discovered in the frame stables of P. R. & G. T. YOUNG, No. 327 West Twentieth-street, near the Eleventh-avenue. The flames spread rapidly, and shortly after the discovery of the fire the stables were totally destroyed. Three horses that were in them were suffocated. Some sheds connected with the coal and kindling wood establishment of the Messrs. YOUNG were partially destroyed. The loss on horses and stock amounts to about $1,000, on which there is no insurance. The sheds and stables were owned by B. C. WARDELL, and the loss is about $500, on which there is no insurance. The fire, it is thought, was the work of incendiaries.

CROTON SHORT.—A correspondent, who lives in Ninth-street, complains that the Croton will not flow in any part of his premises, except upon the first floor, unless very early in the morning or late at night,—hence hasn't had a bath for a year unless he anticipates the milkman in rising and outsits our ruling classes before getting to bed. The East River vessels draw the supplies dry. He thinks this rather tough in consideration of the boasted abundance of Croton and the size of his annual tax.'

ANOTHER VICTIM OF BURNING FLUID.—Mrs. ADELAIDE SCHUMANN, a married woman, 17 years of age, died yesterday, at No. 121 Ridge-street, from the effects of severe burns. Last Friday afternoon, while taking two fluid lamps from the mantel-piece, one slipped from her hand and broke upon the stove, igniting her garments. Before the fire could be extinguished she was fatally injured. Coroner SCHIRMER held an inquest, and upon this testimony the jury rendered a verdict of accidental death.

FIREMAN KILLED ON THE HARLEM RAILROAD.—JOHN THOMAS, a young man employed on the Harlem Railroad as a fireman on a locomotive, fell off the tender near Mott Haven yesterday, and was killed. His body was brought to this City, and an inquest will be held to-day.

TAMMANY SOCIETY.—A meeting of the Tammany Society was called for last evening, but the room being engaged for a ball, an adjournment was had until the time for holding the next regular meeting—the first Monday in next month.

MEETING OF THE YACHT CLUB.—The regular quarterly meeting of the New-York Yacht Club was held yesterday afternoon at the Club House, Hoboken. Commodore STEVENS was present. Some routine business was transacted, and the Club dined together.

Dr. BOYNTON gives his closing lecture on "Man, and the Present Race of Animals," at the Cooper Institute, this evening—and on to-morrow afternoon, a very attractive entertainment for school children and parents.

Police Reports.

THE PELL-STREET HOMICIDE.—At the inquest held by Coroner JACKMAN, yesterday, upon the body of Dennis McHenry, the man who was stabbed on Monday night in the liquor saloon No. 23 Pell-street, the evidence was mainly a repetition of that given at the ante-mortem examination. The only additional testimony was that of Dr. Joseph J. Hull, the House Physician of the New-York Hospital, who had made a post-mortem examination of the remains, and believed death to have been caused by peritonitis, the result of the wound in the abdomen. The jury found that deceased "came to his death at the hands of John Crimens, on the 10th day of October, 1859, with some instrument to them unknown." Crimens was examined by the Coroner in the prescribed way. He stated that he was an Irishman, 24 years of age, and a type-caster by occupation. In reference to the charge he said: "I did it in my own defence; I thought those who were with deceased intended to injure me; I did not intend to kill the man." The prisoner was committed to the Tombs. Deceased was born in Ireland, and was 30 years of age. His acquaintances say that he was a peaceable, industrious man. He leaves a wife and four children. Crimens was also married. His wife and child remain at No. 23 Pell-street.

AN UNSAFE OPERATION.—Two burglars entered the dwelling-house of Mr. John McDonough, No. 90 Fourth-avenue, early yesterday morning, by forcing open the cellar door. They carried off a small iron safe with its contents, consisting of bank-bills, drafts and papers, valued in the aggregate at $151. The thieves were observed by Officer PRIOR, of the Seventeenth Ward, hurriedly transporting the safe up the avenue. He pursued them, but dropping the property they quickened their pace. One of them, named Edward McGovern, was finally overtaken, but his confederate escaped. The safe was restored to its owner, with its contents untouched, and the prisoner was committed by Justice STEERS, to answer a charge of burglary.

A TURBULENT VISITOR.—James Shore called upon Mrs. Mary Ann Marsh, at No. 218 Bowery, on Wednesday night, and quarreled with her about a $5 bill. He finally beat her with his fists in a shocking manner. She thereupon discharged a pistol at him without doing him any damage. Yesterday morning he had her arrested on a charge of attempting to kill him, but the evidence was not sufficient to hold her. Mrs. Marsh immediately made a complaint against Shore for assault and battery, and as her face bore indubitable testimony to the fact, Justice STEERS entertained the charge, and sent Shore to prison in default of $500 bail.

ALLEGED FEMALE COUNTERFEITERS.—Ellen Delany and Margaret Sheehan were arrested yesterday on complaint of Mr. Edward Lambert, of No. 337 Broadway, for tendering counterfeit bills in payment for $29 worth of dry goods. Alderman BRADY committed the accused to answer.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

Board of Alderman.

DEATH OF SENATOR BRODERICK—ELECTION POLLS

The Board of Aldermen transacted very little business of importance last evening. Alderman BRADLEY offered a preamble and resolutions in regard to the death of Senator BRODERICK. The resolutions expressed deep sympathy with the family of the deceased, and declared that the Common Council being informed that a committee of citizens connected with the Fire Department was making arrangements to testify in some conspicuous manner to the sentiments of the public in regard to Senator BRODERICK's death, would take part in any properly conducted ceremonies. Alderman BRADLEY addressed the Board in behalf of his resolutions, and eulogized the late Senator. The resolutions were adopted. After a long discussion with regard to locating the Election polls, the Board adjourned to Monday.

STREET CLEANING—THE DEATH OF SENATOR BRODERICK—REVIEW OF THE FIREMEN'S PROCESSION.

The Board of Councilmen met last evening, the President, Councilman CORNELL in the Chair.

The City Inspector sent in a communication which was ordered to be printed, setting forth that he had made arrangements to have all the streets cleaned, but that at present there was a temporary arrangement with Mr. Smith to sweep the leading avenues and some of the principal streets. The communication was ordered to be printed.

A resolution was adopted directing the Clerk of the Common Council to place notices in each election district where the polls are to be held, to notify citizens that the Board of Registration meet there for the purpose of registering the voters of the district.

The Corporation Attorney's monthly statement was received, showing that he recovered $264 during the month for violations of Corporation ordinances.

A communication was received from the Street Commissioner in reference to the Fifteenth Ward Station-house, in which he said the Common Council could not, even by unanimous vote, legally name a person to be employed, nor the force to be paid for any work by contract.

A series of resolutions relating to the death of Senator Broderick, came in from the Board of Aldermen, and were spoken to by Councilman LENT, who eulogized the character of the deceased Senator. The resolutions were unanimously concurred in.

An invitation was received, and accepted, from the Chief Engineer to review the procession of the Fire Department on the 17th inst.

The Finance Committee reported in favor of an appropriation of $11,400 to the Street Commissioner for excess of expenditure for the Fire Department. The report was adopted, and the meeting adjourned.

CITY POLITICS.

Democratic Reform Movement—Meeting at the Fifth-avenue Hotel—Resolutions and Speeches.

In obedience to the call of the Committee of thirty-one prominent Democrats, a meeting was held last evening at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, the object, as set forth, being to procure such an organization of the Democratic Party of this City as shall exercise a conservative influence tending to elevate the character of the party, by securing the nomination of well-known and tried Democrats, of respectability and character, and thus to promote the public interest. The meeting was called to order at 8¼ P. M., by WATTS SHERMAN, Esq., there being at the time about one hundred persons present. Mr. SHERMAN directed their attention to the private meeting held on the 7th inst., which originated the present movement. This, he took it, was a meeting of Democrats and members of the Democratic Party. It was more a private than a public meeting, intended, as he supposed, for consultation among themselves as to the best means of attaining the important object they had in view. He would say, therefore, if there were those present who could not act with them in the movement, their taste would dictate to them the proper course to pursue.

As no one withdrew, it was presumed that they were all of one mind.

Mr. SHERMAN went on to state that the object was not antagonistic to Tammany Hall; he recognized the necessity of organization;—it was necessary to secure the success of any great movement. We were all complaining of oppression in public bodies, especially in the municipal bodies. The persons who constituted the mass of the present meeting were accustomed to sit down over their wine at dinner and groan loudly of oppression—that bad men were elected to office, who were incapable and dishonest. If they were thus merely to complain, affairs would go on from bad to worse. Action was necessary for Democrats—prompt and resolute action, if they would see these abuses rectified. They hold the power in their own hands. The proper course for Democrats to pursue was to organize with a view to influence, and as far as possible to control the action of the primary meetings, and through them Tammany Hall, to influence those gentlemen to present honest and capable men for office.

Mr. SHERMAN was then nominated President of the meeting, and C. S. JOHNSON Secretary. Mr. S. M. L. BARLOW came forward and offered a series of resolutions, which after various alterations and amendments were adopted. The following is a copy:

RESOLUTIONS:

1. Resolved, That the nominations for State Officers, made by the Democratic Convention at Syracuse, meet with our entire approval. The eminent fitness and ability of the nominees, no less than their high personal character, entitle them to the support of every friend of good government, and of a sound financial policy to the State administration.

2. Resolved, That we regard the recent proclamation of WILLIAM H. SEWARD, of an "irrepressible conflict" between the North and the South, which must end in the conquest or subjection of one of them, as the demonstration of a fanatical and disloyal spirit, which should be promptly rebuked and resisted by every good citizen who loves his country and desires a perpetuation of the union of the States.

3. Resolved, That believing as we do, that the dominance of the principles of a true and honest Democratic Party in the City, State and nation, is essential to the peace and prosperity of the country, we have witnessed with regret the neglect of many well-known Democrats, to take any part in the control of the party organization, or in the nomination to offices of great trust and importance in the municipal and State Governments; that the time has arrived when this duty can no longer be safely neglected; therefore,

4. Resolved, That a committee of twenty-five be appointed, on the part of this meeting, to confer and advise with our fellow Democrats for the purpose of securing the selection of candidates for office who shall be entitled by their reputation and standing in the community, as capable and honest men and Democrats, to receive the cordial support of the whole party, and of all those who believe in the necessity of a careful and wise administration of our City finances.

5. Resolved, That the Committee of twenty-five heretofore provided for, report on the expediency of continuing this organization, and, if expedient, to report a plan of organization.

The Hon. JOHN COCHRANE spoke at considerable length upon the necessity of the present movement, and paid a high compliment to the character of the meeting for intelligence, influence and wealth. They possessed the power to dictate who the candidates for the important offices should be, and the present movement would be responded to in the interior portions of the State, when they saw that we were successful. It had been proclaimed that they were Democrats, and not opposed to Tammany Hall. He was for co-operating with the present organizations—of going to Tammany Hall with conciliatory advice, and thus influencing them to place the right men in nomination. More good could thus be done than by making war upon the organization. They were not reformers to explode established systems, but to improve them. They were not to throw away the instruments which they had heretofore used, but sharpen their edge to make them more efficient. He urged the necessity of going to the meetings where nominations were made. They had been kept away from Tammany Hall, on account of the scenes which were common there, and had thus left the field entirely to the men of whom they now complain. Nominations were made by the large party organization, but the important organization was the primary meetings. Could they control them? If they could place their hand upon that electric wire they could effect the whole current of political organization. With party men the immediate object was success, and that depended on office, and the salary of office—all these depended on money, without which no operations could be successfully carried on. This they held in their hands; and as soon as the leaders found that there was an exchequer, and firm hands to manage it, they would have the leaders coming to them to consult, advise, and act with them. He urged the necessity of organizing, and of continuing the organization, for the purpose of affecting the important elections soon to come off. Mr. COCHRANE was frequently applauded.

Judge BRONSON being present, was called on and spoke briefly of his sympathy with the movement, though he was not definitely informed as to what was proposed to be done. He desired to advance as far as possible the good work which he supposed they were aiming to accomplish. He called for the reading of the resolutions, and suggested various changes in their phraseology. He did not like the terms "organized leaders;" he knew of none.

Messrs. WHITLOCK, LARNED, the Hon. JOHN MCKEON and others addressed the meeting, the interest increasing until its close.

The original Committee of Thirty-one was empowered to nominate the Advisory Committee of twenty-five, three of whom, it is understood, are to represent Brooklyn. The meeting adjourned to assemble at the call of the Committee.

The Divine Mission of Democracy.

The "divine mission" of the Democratic party! How can you doubt Mr. DICKINSON's statement? From his well-known attachment to Scripture authority, he undoubtedly considers his belief in "human agency" has been fully ex-pounded in a certain chapter from MAG-CABE-ES. To be sure, that book has been deemed rather apocryphal, but, with him, sufficiently belligerent to make it canon-ical, and, like another hero, would

"Prove his doctrine orthodox
By apostolic blows and knocks."

Yours, truly, PAX VOBIS.

MOZART HALL JUDICIARY NOMINATIONS.

At the meeting of the Nominating Convention of the Mozart Hall wing of the City Democracy last evening, the following candidates were put for ward. For Judge of the Superior Court, Anthony L. Robinson. For Judge of the Marine Court, Henry Alker. Both these gentlemen were nominated for the same offices at Tammany Hall on Wednesday evening, and the other Mozart Hall Judiciary nominees, viz.: William H. Leonard, for the Supreme Court; James Moncrieff, for the Superior, and Chas. P. Daly for the Common Pleas, are also the candidates of Tammany Hall. After the Judiciary nominations had been made, a ballot for Supervisor resulted as follows: Stephen H. Lynch, 45; John R. Briggs, 46. A second ballot gave Mr. Briggs 55 votes and Mr. Lynch, 47. A motion was immediately made to make the nomination of the former unanimous. It was about to be put by the Chair, when the lights suddenly went out, and the Convention sat in darkness. A little confusion ensued, but order having been partially restored, a motion to adjourn to Tuesday evening next was carried. Mr. Lynch's supporters claim that Mr. Briggs' nomination was unfairly made, as the votes on the last ballot exceeded by five the number that had been polled at any previous time.

MOZART HALL ASSEMBLY NOMINATIONS.

Mozart Hall Fifth Assembly District Convention met last evening, for the third time, to select a nominee. As on the two former occasions, the delegates (12 in number) were equally divided between WM. Kane and Wm. L. Coles, and the Convention had not, at a late hour, come to any definite conclusion.

TAMMANY HALL SENATORIAL NOMINATIONS.

The Tammany Hall Senatorial Conventions for the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh Districts met last evening In the Fifth District Bernard Kelly was nominated. Mr. Kelly is also the nominee of the Mozart Hall division. In the Sixth District Richard Schell (present incumbent) was nominated unanimously on the first ballot. (W. Drake Parsons is the Mozart Hall nominee in this district.) Nicholas B. Connolly was nominated in the Seventh District, on the second ballot, over P. G. Molloney, who was nominated last week by the Mozart Hall Convention. The first ballot stood 12 for Connolly and 9 for Molloney, and the second 13 for Connolly and 8 for Molloney. The proceedings passed off quietly.

THE MEMORIAL CHURCH IN SOUTH-WARK.

There was a meeting in the lecture-room of the Historical Society last evening, called under the auspices of the New-England Society, for the purpose of listening to the Rev. Dr. WADDINGTON, in relation to the proposed erection of a church in London, in memory of the Puritans. The Chair was occupied by WM. M. EVARTS, Esq., President of the Society, who stated the object of the meeting, and introduced the reverend visitor to the audience.

Dr. WADDINGTON confined himself chiefly to a recital of the early efforts made to establish colonies here, and a comparison between the attempts to colonize, before the time when the Separatists, or Pilgrims, came, and their final success. He contrasted effectively, the admirable outfit and the favorable auspices under which those who attempted the establishment of a colony on the Kennebec, sailed; with the meagre supplies, and struggles of the pilgrims—their persecution, and the obstacles thrown in the way of their departure, and their sufferings after their arrival here. The vital distinction between them, he believed, was, that the former was undertaken merely as a commercial speculation, while the latter was the result of deep-seated religious sentiment, determined to find a place where God could be worshiped, in accordance with the dictates of the consciences of the worshipers. It was to the deeply-rooted religious sentiment of the pilgrims, that he attributed the success of their undertaking. They received no assistance nor any encouragement from the great men of the day. The Mayflower sailed from the Thames silently. There was no parade, no show, no gathering of the people, to wish prosperity to the undertaking. In sublime silence the vessel left the Thames, and passed on her way to the new land. There was but a limited supply of provisions, and of such implements as were necessary for their use. It was not long after their arrival when 50 of the 101 had died. So numerous were the graves that they were obliged to smooth them over, lest the Indians should discover them. Yet they struggled on. They remained firm, while those who had been before them broke down—failed utterly. And why? Because they had discovered the Truth and were determined to hold it in trust for all mankind. In the course of his remarks he stated that he had found great confusion existing in the minds of many who had not given the matter much attention, in relation to the Pilgrims and the Puritans. The Puritans, he said, were those who, while they remained in the Church, tried to reform it, while the Pilgrims—or Separatists—went out to reform. In conclusion he wished to say something of how and why he came here. Some 12 years ago, he said, he was called to take charge of the old church, and at that time they were expecting to lose the lease. Taking great interest in the matter, he had often thought as he passed by the Court-houses, whether the documents relating to its early history might not be found in them. He spoke of the matter to his brethren, and the result was a resolve on his part to try to procure them. At about the same time the Hon. ABBOTT LAWRENCE called upon him, and he gave him some documents of interest. Mr. LAWRENCE took a great interest in the matter, and promised to secure to him an opportunity of searching, and made him promise to seek out all the information he could get. He also suggested that the Church—the erection of which was contemplated—should be made a Memorial Church, and that collections for its construction should be made not only in England but in America. He pledged his word to Mr. LAWRENCE that he would continue at the work. Mr. LAWRENCE had said he was going home, but that he would return and work with him. Mr. LAWRENCE died, and they lost their building. But he had kept on; following the lesson of the fathers, he had determined to maintain his ground. He came to the United States, and he came here to put the love of Christian truth to the test. He had been well received everywhere. In Boston, in Plymouth, in New-Haven, Hartford and other places, he had been encouraged to carry on the work. In New-York, he confessed, he had been somewhat tantalized. Here he had had many meetings and many promises that if he would come back in September, when the people would have returned from the country, he would secure liberal contributions. Now he was here in September, and he was told that he was too late—that the Irish—the Irish delegation was here. When he returned, which he was about to do, he could tell his brethren that he had been exceedingly well received, but Englishmen would not understand how that could be, when he had so little in the way of contributions to show them. There were thirty gentlemen in New-York, of whom the President of the meeting was one, who had contributed nobly to the work, and he ventured to hope that before he left more than thirty persons would be found ready to help the cause.

The Rev. Dr. ADAMS regretted that no better success had resulted from the efforts of Dr. WADDINGTON. The people of New-York had very many calls upon them for help, a fact which might, in a measure at least, account for the small amount that had as yet been contributed. He wished heartily that something more could be done before Dr. WADDINGTON's return; but, in any event, he thought it would be well to leave the matter to the thought and action of the Christian people of America. While speaking of the character of the Pilgrims, and of the propriety of continuing the work, he remarked that in such enterprises he could not see that there was much difference between faith and pluck.

The Rev. Dr. ASA SMITH also regretted that so small a sum had been contributed. He had understood that all that Dr. WADDINGTON had yet received was about $4,000. Dr. WADDINGTON said it did not exceed $3,000. Dr. SMITH thought the result was not creditable to American men.

Mr. EVARTS thought the character of the Pilgrims safe in the hands of Dr. WADDINGTON, but doubted whether the character of their descendants were safe in their own hands. Dr. WADDINGTON might return to England, but his leaving here would not remove the disgrace that would attach to them, if something better were not done.

The Rev. Dr. STORRS, of Brooklyn, was under the impression that there was a Committee in existence for the purpose of collecting contributions, and he thought it would be well either to continue that Committee or appoint another for a like purpose. The purpose was one that appealed forcibly to but few, and therefore great results ought not to have been anticipated. In conclusion, he offered to be one of ten, to raise $200 each, within a week, which would bring up the total contribution to about $5,000.

The President stated that Mr. W. A. LAMBERT was the treasurer of the Committee, and that any one desiring to contribute, might deposit the money with him.

While three workmen were at work upon a scaffold, on Monday, Oct. 10, at New-Lebanon, Columbia County, it gave way, and the three were precipitated to the ground, a distance of twenty-six feet. One of them named Lahal, when taken up was quite dead, and the others were very seriously hurt.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.—The monthly reunions of the Society composing the Central Congregational Church, the Rev. J. CLEMENT FRENCH, pastor, were pleasantly diversified at the last gathering on Wednesday evening of this week, by a surprise party given to the pastor, at whose house the reunion on this occasion was appointed to be held. While the pastor, with his wife, were receiving the guests in the parlors, some of the lady parishioners quietly took possession of the basement, and spread the tables with an abundance of eatables, set off with rare and elegant bouquets, besides laying away a good store of provisions for future use in the pantries. During the evening the reverend gentleman and his wife were induced, upon some slight pretext, to descend to the basement, where they were quickly followed by the entire party, who had the pleasure of witnessing one pastor at least who was really "taken by surprise." A well-filled purse, inclosed in a handsome bouquet—a tribute of affection from the younger members of the congregation—was presented, with a neat speech in their behalf, by W. F. CUTTER, Esq., to Mr. FRENCH, who responded with great feeling and in the most happy terms. The incident was highly gratifying to all concerned, and evinced the rare love and esteem in which Mr. FRENCH is held by the members of his congregation.

TO DEALERS IN WOVEN SKIRTS.

We hereby give notice that Letters Patent of the United States have just been granted, vesting in us the exclusive right to make, sell and use, what is known in the market as the "Woven Skeleton Skirt," whether the springs are inserted while in the loom or afterwards.

It is generally known to manufacturers that this Skirt is original with us; but inasmuch as dealers may not be aware of our right, we hereby notify the Trade that the "Woven Skirts" cannot be legally sold after this date unless they bear our stamp, or are manufactured by parties holding a license from us. The name of the manufacturer, and date of the patent, Oct. 4, 1859, must be stamped on each Skirt. The fact that we have heretofore stamped our Skirts "Patent applied for" is well known, and we trust that all honorable merchants as well as manufacturers will now voluntarily comply with the requirements of the law, without a necessity for compulsory measures. The Trade will please take notice that they will be liable to, us for damages for the sale of all goods manufactured without a license after this date. We are prepared to license responsible parties to manufacture under our patent. Application can be made to WILLIAM KING, No. 153 West 15th-st., or S. H. DOUGHTY, No. 22 John-st., who are fully authorized to grant such license.

JAMES DRAPER,
JAMES BROWN,
WILLIAM KING,
S. H. DOUGHTY,

New-York, Oct. 4, 1859.

Messrs. S. H. DOUGHTY and others.

SIRS: As there two methods of producing the Skirt patented by you this day, it may be of service definitely to explain the scope of your claim. In one method the hoops are inserted while the tapes are in the loom, and during the process of manufacturing the same; in the other method the tapes are manufactured in a condition ready to receive the hoops, and the latter are inserted afterward. Skirts produced by either of these methods are covered by your patent, and any parties making or selling the same are liable to you for damages for all made or sold after this date. Very respectfully,

New-York, Oct. 4, 1859. THOMAS D. STETSON.

THE ALL-SUFFICIENT THREE!

TRIESEMAR 1, 2, AND 3.

Protected by Royal Letters Patent of England, and secured by the Seals of the Ecole de Pharmacie de Paris, and the Imperial College of Medicine, Vienna.

No. 1 is invaluable for exhaustion, spermatorrhœa, and all physical disabilities.

No. 2 completely eradicates all traces of those diseases that have been hitherto treated by the nauseous and pernicious use of copaiva and cubebs.

No. 3 has entirely supplanted the injurious use of mercury, hereby insuring to the sufferer speedy relief, dispersing all impurities and rooting out the venom of disease.

TRIESEMAR, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, are prepared in the form of a lozenge, devoid of taste and smell, and can be carried in the waistcoat pocket. Sold in tin cases, and divided into separate doses, as administered by Velpeau, Lallemand, Roux, Ricord, &c., &c. Price $5 each, or four cases for $20, which saves $3; and $27 cases, whereby there is a saving of $9. To be had wholesale and retail of Dr. BARROW, No. 194 Bleecker-st., New-York. Immediately on receiving remittance, Dr. Barrow will forward the Triesmar to any part of the world, securely packed, and addressed according to the instruction of the writer. Sold also by

THE HYGEIAN COUGH MIXTURE—MADE by a lady who has long circulated it among her friends, who testify in a card as to its efficacy, is now offered to the public. Remarkable cures have been effected by the use of this remedy, and persons threatened with consumption and suffering from severe colds and diseases of the lungs and throat, have been benefitted and cured by it, when in many cases all other means had failed. Accompanying each bottle will be a certificate, signed by gentlemen and ladies well known in the community, whose names will at least be a guaranty that there is some virtue in the remedy, and that no more is claimed for it than those who have used it are willing to testify to. A trial only is asked to satisfy any one.

The mixture is for sale by THOMAS DARLING, No. 885 Broadway, and by HALL & BLAUVELT, Druggists, No. 50 Cortlandt-st., New-York. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

DR. WATSON TREATS ALL FORMS OF A certain kind of disease with a success which has won for him the confidence of the public. The remedies are safe, and cause no interruption from business. Dr. WATSON'S work—"The Cause and Cure"—has been pronounced by the reviewers the best popular compendium on all diseases of a private nature, including Spermatorrhœa and Debility, the results of early abuse, excess, or other causes. "Should be read by all persons previous to marriage."—Medical Gazette. Fine colored plates. Price $1. To be had of CHARLES MILLER, No. 436 Broadway, New-York, and of the author, at his private residence, No. 459 Broome-st., second block west of Broadway, from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M.

☞ Separate consulting rooms.

DR. LACOSTE, OF PARIS, HAS REMOVED his French private Medical Institute, for the treatment of the more difficult and delicate cases, to the elegant house No. 15 LeRoy-place, corner of Bleecker and Greene sts., two blocks west of Broadway. Private entrance on Greene-st. Separate parlors for ladies. The superiority of the new French system of treatment in a certain class of diseases, is known all over the world; and without the use of any mercury or other poisons, this method eradicates even the longest standing cases. Particular attention paid to all affections of ladies.

DR. R. COBBETT MAY BE CONSULTED with confidence on all diseases requiring secrecy. From a long and extended practice of over 27 years in the above specialty, and at his present location, he can safely promise to all who may stand in need of medical or surgical assistance a radical cure, no matter of how long standing. The victims of misplaced confidence, or those who may have been unfortunate in the selection of a physician, are particularly invited to call. N. B.—Dr. C. is a member of the N. Y. University Medical College and College of Surgeons, London. See his diplomas in his office, No. 19 Duane-st., opposite Chambers-st.

HUNDREDS OF THE UNFORTUNATE have disappointed of a cure by not calling on DR HUNTER at first, in the Hunterian Museum, No. 3 Division-st., New-York City, established in 1834, for the Preservation of Human Life. PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—Dr. HUNTER has for thirty years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated not less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours. It roots out the poisonous taint the blood is sure to absorb unless this remedy is used. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for nothing, that treats of the evil effects of early abuse and indulgence, is embellished with elaborate colored engravings, portraying every feature and phase of disease, exposes the fallacy of the ordinary modes adopted for the cure of local as well as hereditary maladies, and gives the only safe and infallible remedy for expunging every trace of the virus from the system.

THE PLAY AT PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Oct. 13.

The cricket match was recommenced this morning. Messrs. LOCKYER and WISDEN resumed their places at the wickets, and the last wicket fell for 126 runs. Mr. PARR was absent, having been disabled by a blow on the left elbow from a ball from JACKSON, in the Lockyer and Stephenson match at Hoboken, so that he was obliged to have surgical advice. The scores this morning were:

Lockyear's total, and not out	31
Wisden b. Gibbes	3
Jackson c. W. R. Wister, b. Senior	6
Total byes, 4; leg byes, 3; wides, 11.

The fielding, this morning, was not extraordinary. A large number of persons were on the ground, with every prospect of a large attendance in the afternoon.

At 12 o'clock England took the field, NEWALL fielding for PARR.

W. ROTCH, WISTER and BAYARD were first at the bat. WISTER played steadily for some time. BAYARD also played steadily to WISDEN'S underhand slows, a la PARR. The following is the score:

Bayard	c. Carpenter, b. Wisden 0
S. Wright	c. and b. Wisden 2
W. R. Wister	b. Grundy 3
Wallis	c. Jackson, b. Wisden 0
Sharratt	b. Grundy 1
Senior	b. Wisden, from the pad 6
Lang	c. Lockyer, b. Grundy 8
Hammond	b. Wisden 0
Gibbes	b. Grundy 6
Newhall	c. and b. Wisden 0
Beasley	b. Wisden 3
E. Wright	c. Stephenson, b. Jackson 7
Vernon	run out 2
Morgan	b. Jackson 3
Hunt	l. b. w., b. Jackson 0
Wilby	b. Jackson 0
Collis	st. Lockyer, b. Wisden 0
Hall	run out 0
Jones	Wister, b. Jackson 5
Kephardt	run out 10
Fisher	b. Jackson 2
Waterman	not out 0
Leg byes	2
Total	60

The English sent in HAYWARD and LOCKYER to the bowling of KEPHARDT and WILBY. HAYWARD was finely caught at wicket by LANG from KEPHARDT'S bowling for 0. LOCKYER was stumped by BARCLAY, bowled by LANG for 9. CARPENTER was caught by HAMMOND, bowled by SENIOR for 7. CAFFYN scored not out, and GRUNDY also not out, 2. There were five wides and byes, making the total 29, all that was necessary to win the game.

The match was thus finished in favor of All England on their second innings, with the loss of three wickets.

The Twenty-two scored 154 in their two innings, including byes, etc., of which the twelve English players on the American side scored 66 runs, and the ten Americans scored 82 runs.

The fielding of the Twenty-two was exceedingly good, particularly that of MORGAN, NEWHALL, BARCLAY, BAYARD, W. R. WISTER and FISHER. KEPHARDT bowled finely. HAMMOND, SENIOR, H. WRIGHT, S. WRIGHT and GIBBES also distinguished themselves. LANG kept wicket well, and bowled with much headwork; he got considerable applause for his share in taking two wickets.

The English divide themselves, and play a match North vs. South, CÆSAR and PARR out, for their benefit, on Friday.

Some party has offered the English cricketers $5,000 to play a base ball match in New-York before they leave America. This may be brought about if the sum is guaranteed by responsible American parties, but in no case will they play the catching of the ball on the bound. It is possible to induce them to come back to New-York after the Hamilton and Rochester cricket matches, and before they depart in the Quebec steamer.

They are at the Girard House, and leave on Saturday afternoon for the International Hotel, Niagara Falls, where they will stay over Sunday.

They will commence the match at Hamilton, C. W., on Monday, and play a match at Rochester, N. Y., on Thursday, practicing base ball by the way.

A grand dinner will be given here to-morrow night in honor of the English players.

At a meeting of Baltimore cricketers, held Monday evening, the Committee appointed to invite the All-England Eleven to that city, reported that they would accept the invitation, after they had played a game at Rochester, provided each one of their number should have his expenses paid and receive $25 in addition. A subsequent dispatch states that the Eleven preferred to postpone their visit until next Summer, when they expected to return to this country. The meeting adjourned without coming to any decision.

THE NEXT MATCH IN CANADA.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

HAMILTON, C. W., Tuesday, Oct. 11, 1859.

The Twenty-two of Canada, who are to dispute for victory at cricket with the Eleven of England, were selected—finally selected—last night after much trouble. The following are the names:

Montreal—Pickering, J. U. Smith. Toronto—Parsons, Heward, Reid. Brantford—H. Totten, W. Totten. Brockville—Jones. Belleville—Starling, Despard. Kingston—Worswick. London—Bayley, G. Harris. St. Catherines—T. H. Phillips, H. Phillips, George Rykert. Hamilton—Gillespie, Rogerson, Sharpe, Stokes, Basteed. Grantham—J. Hamilton.

It is possible that another Montreal man or so may come up, and perhaps another Torontonian, but in all likelihood these names will stand.

The reason I said above that the players mentioned had been finally selected, is that several previous choices have been made, to recount which would be to tell the history of Cricket in Canada, and the many differences which have prevailed among cricketers here. It would seem that all difficulties are now adjusted, and that the strongest men of Canada East and West are reunited. This is good news for your New-York lovers of the game, as well as for us, for it holds out a promise of a stoutly fought game at Hoboken next year between the Elevens of Canada and the United States.

The Hamilton ground has been very carefully attended to of late, and is now in excellent order. The turf is fine, soft and smooth, and possessing all the "springiness" so requisite for the proper display of good bowling. Stands have been put up for ladies, for the scorers, for the Press, and the arrangements generally promise to be of the best.

The Rochester people will afterwards have an opportunity of seeing the Eleven play. They have made arrangements for a game on or about the 20th. I think it probable, however, that it will be deferred for a few days, and not commence till Monday, the 27th. The sides are to be the Eleven vs. Twenty-two from the States and Canada. The Rochester Cricket Club have already written to the Canadian and American Clubs, to know what players they can select from.

SPORTING ITEMS.

MICHAEL PHELAN authorizes Wilkes' Spirit to state that he will play an international game of billiards with the English champion, ROBERTS, for a stake of $5,000 or $10,000 a side; the match to take place in this City. PHELAN proposes, in compensation for the privilege of playing here, to make an allowance of $500 to ROBERTS for his traveling expenses. Mr. PHELAN'S business will not permit him to leave the country.

Wilkes' Spirit says: "In accordance with the suggestion which we made last week, AARON JONES, who had a deposit up for a match with SAYERS for the championship of England, has conceded his privilege for the first chance at SAYERS to JOHN C. HEENAN, and in accordance therewith, we have dispatched a request to the editor of Bell's Life to forfeit for JONES, and to put HEENAN on the record in his place. HEENAN will stand next on the list of SAYER'S engagements after the match with the Unknown, and as that is fixed for the 15th November, and may perhaps be ended sooner by a forfeit on the part of the Unknown, the American champion is sure to be able to measure himself against the redoubtable master of the English Ring by next May, or at the furthest by next June."

FINEGASS is anxious to bring on a ring match with ROCHE, and to that effect has made a deposit of $150 for a match, $500 a side, on the 17th November. FINEGASS, it will be recollected, forfeited to ROCHE $350 a few weeks since, in consequence of having received an injury during his training.

Not Committed to Mr. Bates.

From the National Intelligencer.

We have seen it stated with some surprise in the Detroit Advertiser, as well as in some other esteemed contemporaries, an intimation that the editors of the Intelligencer had entered into an arrangement with a distinguished gentleman of New-York—who lately passed through Washington on his way to the Episcopal Convention, at Richmond, and with whom the editors had the pleasure of a passing interview of a few minutes—to support a certain eminent Whig statesman of the West for the Presidency. This, like many idle stories which arise, often innocently, to have their day and be forgotten, we did not deem worth contradiction. But as our contemporaries seem, by copying the article, to attach some consequence to our course, it may be proper to say that the allegation is incorrect; for, ready and happy as we should be to support the gentleman in question, as we would any one of several other statesmen in the Whig ranks, if regularly presented to us by our party, yet we are not in the habit, in a matter so weighty, of jumping to conclusions with so much facility or quite so prematurely. We never presume to lead in a business so grave, or enter into "agreement" with individual gentlemen, however eminent or worthy. As we have heretofore, so shall we now, abide the voice of our brave party—firm still, we hope, however reduced—and share its fortunes, whatever they be.

THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE FAIR.

Ingenious Machinery—Failure of the Apple Crop—The Chinese Potato—Some Pumpkins—Trial of the Steam Plow, &c., &c.

Fortune is smiling upon the American Institute this month with ample apology and atonement for the frowns of September. The receipts are flattering at Palace Garden gate, and novelties are added to the exhibition every day. Every foot of room in the machinery department is occupied, and every machine that works by steam power is daily in operation. Nothing excited more admiration than the "variety-moulding machine," exhibited by Mr. S. M. HAMILTON, of Baltimore, which, by virtue of several curiously simple devices, converts a straight, curved or crooked stick of joist in a few minutes into almost any design of moulding—curved, waved, elliptical or straight—which it would take weeks to rival by simple hand-power, and by the processes which usually shape the ornamental mouldings of our furniture and buildings. One wonders how workmen can have patience with saw, hammer and chisel to go tediously on in the old way of tenoning slats for blinds after seeing with what rapidity and unerring exactness ELLIS' patent machine turns them off. By its aid a boy tenons from ten to fifteen thousand slats a day. It is adjustable to any size of slat, and works hard or soft wood before or after dressing. Venetian blinds ought, in view of this machine, to be furnished cheaper hereafter. A. D. WAYMOTH'S universal wood-turner was yesterday engaged in turning out wooden pill-boxes with marvelous celerity. In ten minutes a stick of undressed pine, two or three feet long, was converted into neat and durable receptacles for aloes and myrrh, calomel and colocynth, or whatever other compounds of drugs the suffering stomach craves for its ailment.

In another department, C. A. DURGIN exhibits an automatic coupling for railroad cars, so simple and so useful that it is surprising it was not before invented and brought into general use. It is applicable to any car, with no other alteration than that of new bumpers so arranged as to receive a tilting hook, which is so shaped as to readily admit the coupling link while the lower part projects far enough to be struck by the knee of a lever, that, by aid of a cord is placed within the command of the brakeman on the car. Two cars running together are linked at once—a gentle pull by the brakeman disconnects them again at will. If, after this, anybody is smashed standing between cars approaching each other to be connected, the Coroner's Jury ought to hold somebody guilty of manslaughter.

The Phonophorus, invented by DAVID S. STILLE, of New-Brunswick, N. J., is a novel arrangement to enable deaf people to hear the Gospel preached to them so long as they sit in their own proper pews. It is a large funnel with a metallic lining, to be located under the desk or in the pulpit, while tin tubing connects it with the pew of the deaf man. Applying the flexible handles of the tube to the ear sounds may be heard by those who heard little before. In the Baptist Church in New-Brunswick one is in use, and it is favorably reported of. The cost is from $25 to $30.

Since our last notice the fruit department has undergone a change; one series of competitors for premiums has disappeared and another been entered. Only a few new candidates for favor make their appearance. Among the apples we notice the "Baker," a large red fruit, pleasant to the taste when uncooked, but most admirable for a roast. The show, however, in this department proves the suspicion which the State Fair published, that in Southern New-York and in New-England apples are scarce this Fall. Apple-growers along the Hudson are sending to Western New-York for their own domestic supply. Of grapes here, as at Albany, the Delaware is king, the dominion having passed away from the Isabella. Everywhere the confession is made that the two monarchs of the FOX family—the Isabella and Catawba—have seen their day, and their blighted leaves and shrivelled, half-ripened berries bear evidence to its truth. It is a little discreditable to fruiterers and amateurs that the exhibitions of fruits should come always mostly from the nurserymen. But another order of things must prevail soon. Four thousand acres of nursery, with at least 10,000 trees on each acre, are ready for market this Fall between Syracuse and Buffalo, and the demand this year is in advance of any preceding season.

Wine from the native grapes of Connecticut, must of necessity have an addition of sugar to fetch them up to a taste that would be recognized as pleasant. The true wine that delicate tasters will admit is just right, should be made of a grape which furnishes sugar enough of itself—for grape sugar when fermented makes brandy, cane-sugar makes rum. Still, if only sugar and water are added to the juice of the Foxes and Frost grapes of Connecticut, a wine that is pure results, and one infinitely more appropriate for Sacramental and medicinal purposes than the colored drugs, fired up with alcohol, which sail under the name of imported wines. Mr. F. A. ROCKWELL, of Ridgefield, (Conn.,) exhibits specimens of his manufacture which smack of the pure native grapy flavor, and are warranted to be what they profess that they are, by rectors, presiding elders and pastors in that land of steady habits. His wine, manufactured from the Lawton blackberry, is indorsed by Dr. REESE as the valuable tonic and astringent that it should be, if the dispensatories are not all at sea on the presumed virtues of blackberries in a-tonic diarrhœas. In passing—at the late State Fair, the Judges on fruits were looking for the native grape that should furnish a native wine in case the Catawba's disease proves as serious as it threatens. They came up toward the conclusion that for this purpose, as for most that a hardy, out-door grape is called upon to fill, the Delaware was by all odds the most promising.

Mr. JAMES GORDON BENNETT'S big pumpkin has been beaten. The largest one of several bearing his initials, and which have attracted no less attention here than they did at the Horticultural Show, was yesterday laid upon HOWE'S Improved Standard Scales, and its true weight read off—124½ pounds. On the same table stands, however, a lot of the true "cream pumpkins," raised by FREDERIC SELCHOW, of Mount Vernon, Westchester County, of which the plumpest turned the scales at 160 pounds. It is a mistake to suppose that these vegetable monsters are good for nothing; at any rate the pumpkin pies of the restaurants are made of them. A gentleman who raised them by the ton last year, sold all his at 2½ cents a pound, to the eating-house people. Another exhibitor from a single seed last year had four pumpkins, weighing severally 97, 90, 80, and 60 pounds—an aggregate of 327 pounds from a single seed, yet the land in the vicinity did not seem terribly exhausted or much enfeebled after the effort. There is no excuse for the blueness of milk while cattle are so enamored of chopped pumpkins, and there is California pumpkin seed left in the land.

People pretty generally have had a glimpse of the famous Dioscorea Batatas, or Chinese potato, and not a few have considered themselves sold when they have paid a swindling price for a tuber, planted it and found in return a scraggy little root not much larger than an overgrown radish. But if they have replanted the scraggy radical the following year, they have found the genuine article, burrowing like the tap root of an old peach tree, far below the regions their coulters and plow-shares ever reached. Mr. MIDDENDORF, of East New-York, exhibits a full-grown specimen—its vine much resembling the sweet-potato vine in the shape of the leaves, but extending some five or six feet in length. A gentleman who exhibits none assures us that he raised 1,700 bushels of these much-discussed, immensely-bepuffed, and sadly-abused roots on an acre last year. Some things have been settled by the experiments already tried. The Chinese potato is no humbug. When cooked its flavor is not inferior to that of the Irish potato, and it is very much more productive. But it runs a fearful depth into the earth, and it is like digging a post-hole, trying to take one out unbroken. With deep tillage and proper instruments for uncarthing it, no question it is a valuable addition to our esculents. But in China they cultivate as many varieties as we do of our common potato. Moreover it is a dioecious plant, and we have only the staminate plant of a single variety, with, of course, no opportunity to reproduce it from the seed. In one respect it has for long sea-voyages an advantage over Mercer, Pink-eye, or any of that tribe. It has very few eyes for sprouts to start out from and waste the juices of the fruit, and hence will keep well.

A Breeding Stable Consumed—A Wife's Heroism.

From the Spirit of the Times.

We regret to learn that one of our most extensive breeders of blood stock at the North, J. B. MONNOT, Esq., of Westchester County, New-York, has met with a most serious loss, the burning of his whole range of stables. It appears that on the morning of Tuesday, the 4th inst., Mr. MONNOT left home with the intention of going to Albany to attend the State Fair, leaving his place in charge of his wife. Shortly after noon, whilst the men were yet at dinner, Mrs. MONNOT discovered dense smoke issuing from the stables; she was alone with her women—not a man within call—the blood horses, worth nearly $100,000, were in imminent danger. For a moment she was paralyzed, but soon recovered her presence of mind to perform what she considered as religious duty—to save her husband's property, even at the risk of her own life; starting her women in various directions in search of assistance, and alone rushed into the stables, from the sides of which the flames were by this time bursting in every direction. Logan, the pride and pet of her husband, was the first to be saved; to unchain and lead him to the door of his box was but the work of an instant, but, terrified at the flames which met his sight, he rushed back to his stall and resisted every attempt to lead him out; until, when nearly exhausted by her exertions, Mrs. MONNOT succeeded in blindfolding him with a part of her dress, when he became tractable, and submitted to be led to a place of safety.

The foreman and helpers of the farm at last arrived, and soon had every hoof turned out. Now commenced a scene the wildest and most appalling eye ever witnessed. The stables which were sufficiently extensive to accommodate 150 horses, and barns containing over 100 tons of hay, were completely enveloped in flames. The horses, which in the excitement of the moment, without regard to sex or age, were turned into a small inclosure, maddened by fear, commenced fighting furiously, kicking, biting, and tearing each other in a fearful manner, making it dangerous and apparently foolhardy in the extreme to attempt to separate them. The foreman, however, watching his opportunity, succeeded in catching by the mane one of the most furious, a two-year old colt, who reared and plunged at such a rate that the man was soon sent flying under the heels of the other horses. Mrs. MONNOT again exhibited her nerve and courage by entering the inclosure and seizing the brute by the nose; she held him until the man had recovered himself and procured a halter with which the animal was secured.

Old Sylphide, by Emilius, bred by R. L. STEVENS, Esq., now owned by Mr. MONNOT, was very near being lost; she was surrounded by flames, and had to be taken out through a hole cut in the side of her stable. Having secured the stock to the best of her judgment, Mrs. MONNOT sent an express messenger to convey the tidings of the calamity to her husband, who was intercepted just as he was on the point of embarking for Albany. On hearing the news, his thoughts were not on his loss, but on his wife. His first exclamation was, "My God! and that poor woman's all alone." He little thout that that poor woman, all alone, had really saved his immense property.

Indian Hostilities on the Plains.

PARTICULARS OF THE ATTACK ON THE MAIL TRAIN.

Correspondence St. Louis Republican.

WESTPORT, MO., Friday, Oct. 7, 1859.

The telegraph may have given you a meagre account of the recent Indian outrages on the Plains, but I hasten to communicate the details, as derived from authentic sources.

Mr. PATTERSON, from Walnut Creek, brought us the first intelligence, and Mr. COLE, of this County, (who was with the train when attacked,) arrived a few hours later with further details. From these gentlemen your correspondent gathers the following facts: Some weeks ago the desperate Camanche Chief, BUFFALO HUMP, with some of his braves, appeared among the Kiowas, and was observed to be in frequent consultation with them. The Kiowas have been dissatisfied and threatening toward the whites during all the Summer, and it was supposed that the mission of BUFFALO HUMP was to stir up their anger to violence. No overt act of hostility occurred, however, until the 20th ult., when a squabble took place at Rickman's Ranch, between some Kiowas and whites, about a horse swap, resulting in a skirmish and the death of an Indian. The other Indians went off swearing, and soon collected a war party.

Three days after (on the 23d of September) a mail train going out—the one which left here on Monday, the 19th of September—was surrounded by a band of Kiowa warriors, near the crossing of Pawnee Fork, some twenty-five miles beyond Cow Creek, and about two hundred and fifty miles from Westport. The Indians demanded "toll," and the conductor dealt out to them sugar, coffee, and a portion of such other articles as he had, but without satisfying them, and then, raising a whoop, they fired into the stage, perfectly riddling it with bullets and arrows, instantly killing the two SMITHS—driver and conductor—and wounding the only other occupant, Mr. COLE. The SMITHS were killed before they had a chance to fire, but COLE leaped from the stage when wounded, fired his pistol, saw an Indian fall, and the others gather around him, and in the confusion that ensued escaped some distance and hid in the grass. The Indians, finding their companion dead, mounted their horses and proceeded in search of their missing enemy. One of the horsemen passed within a few feet of where COLE lay, but failed to discover him. He saw them return to the scene of conflict, abuse the bodies of his fallen friends, strip them of their clothing, and rip open and scatter the contents of the newspaper mail-bag. Fortunately they missed the letter mail-bag, which was afterwards recovered and taken to Rickman's Ranch.

COLE lay all night concealed in the grass, and next morning wandered about until he came up to a camp of PIKE'S Peakers, from whom he received an escort to a trading post, and from thence proceeded homewards. He passed through here some hours since, on his way to his family in Independence.

THURSDAY, Oct. 13—P. M.

The decline in the Stock Market noticed at the close of yesterday's dealings was followed today by an irregular and quite unsettled range of prices, under rather large sales of most of the speculative Railways. The final closing in the afternoon compares as follows with Wednesday:

	Wed.	Thurs.		Wed.	Thurs.
N. Y. Central	80¼	79⅞	Galena	74	73¾
Reading	40	39	Rock Island	64	63¾
M. Central	43⅛	43	Ill. Central	68½	67⅞
M. Guaranteed	17½	16½	Toledo	21¾	21
Harlem Pref.	36	35	Hudson	35¾	35½
Panama	120	120	Pacific	75	73½

The sales of New-York Central were altogether about 6,000 shares. The price opened at 80½, subsequently fell to 79⅞, rose at the Second Board to 80@80½, and left off at 4 o'clock 79⅞ ℔ cent. Most of the Western shares were in good demand at the early Board, but sellers met the market freely, and prices yielded about ½ ℔ cent. For Panama, 120½ ℔ cent. was at one time paid. Pacific Mail sold early at 74½, which was a decline of ⅜ from yesterday, and later in the day 73¾ ℔ cent. was accepted. There was much weakness shown on Reading, and the two Michigan Stocks were also weak in the afternoon. State Stocks ½ ℔ cent. lower on Missouris, and firm on Virginias and Tennessees. Some considerable sales of New-York fives were made at 102½@102⅝. In City Bank Shares a steady demand; Metropolitan at 110, sales, and Manhattan 137, sales. The general market, at 4 o'clock, left off dull on the Speculative Shares; Central 79⅞@80. The movement of the week, thus far, has not been very satisfactory to either class of speculators; from Monday morning to yesterday's Second Board it rose against the Bear account full 2 ℔ cent., without any apparent effort on the part of the usual Street buyers to put up prices, and it has since reacted against the Bull account nearly or quite 1 ℔ cent. The most resistance shown to any thing like a further decided decline is in New-York Central and Galena and Chicago.

The quotations for Discounts have come to be almost stereotyped. The difference between Bank and outside rates scarcely amount to the Broker's commission, ranging 6@7 ℔ cent. for very choice paper, as in date, and 8@10 for fair names. Demand loans to the Stock Brokers are reduced in some cases on State security to 5½ ℔ cent.; the general rule of the Street being 6 ℔ cent., with a free supply of Money to-day. Exchange is dull and will probably remain rather inactive until the mail for the Boston steamer of next week, as the Fulton is not to sail on her regular day for Havre and Southampton, and only one mail will be sent on Saturday, and that to Hamburg and Southampton by the Hamburg steamer. She will also take the whole or a good part of the Mexican Silver now on hand for the English market. The City of Manchester sails on the same day for Liverpool, but no Specie engagements are spoken of for her. The Customs to-day are only $39,000; other receipts into the Sub-Treasury, $102,000; disbursements, $234,000; balance this afternoon, $4,636,756. The steamship Circassian for Galway, took out $60,000 in Specie. The export of Cotton from the Southern ports, reported for last week, (as per mail advices,) amount to 26,000 bales, in addition to which the telegraph reports 15,000 bales from New-Orleans alone, mostly for England:

The Star of the West, Mail steamer from Aspinwall, before reaching Key West, where she transfers passengers and part of her Specie for New-Orleans, broke a shaft, which will probably delay her arrival at this port until Sunday or Monday next. Her Specie list is $2,360,000, of which about $2,000,000 will come to New-York. This is the last service by the Roberts' steamers in connection with the Pacific Company. The next arrival of treasure will be by the Baltic, in connection with the Pacific Company's steamer of Oct. 5 from San Francisco. The mail and treasure service has now been performed ten years, without the loss of a life or a single dollar, by the steamers of the Pacific Company, and with only one serious accident and sacrifice of life and treasure by the old United States or Roberts' steamers. The United States mails are now transferred to Mr. VANDERBILT, while the Gold from San Francisco will probably continue to be monopolized by the Pacific Company, in connection with the North Atlantic (late Collins') steamers on this side, and the time through reduced from 20@22 to 17@19 days.

The September traffic on the Baltimore and Ohio Road is reported $400,136 against $395,789 same month last year.

1859	$71,162 03
1858	88,767 02
Decrease in 1859	$17,604 99
Tolls received from the opening of navigation to and including the fourth week in September, 1859	1,140,521 04
Do. 1858	1,478,350 59
Decrease in 1859	$337,829 55

We have one day's later news from Europe by the City of Washington, this afternoon, to Thursday noon, Sept. 29, from London, and the Africa is due at this port with advices to Saturday, Oct. 1. The English Funds were firm on Thursday, at 95¾@⅞; the Wheat market somewhat improved, and Cotton steady.

Real Estate....TUESDAY, Oct. 11.

House and lot, known as No. 69 Ludlow-street, subject to lease to May 1, 1861, at $650 per year, with privilege to tenant of renewal for five years more, at $750 per year, payable monthly, in advance; rents, after Nov. 1, go to purchaser. ABRAHAM KIND, $8,030.

MESSRS. RAYNOR & BLACKWELL have sold 2 lots, west side of Fifth-avenue, 25 feet 5 inches, south of Forty-sixth street, each full in size, for $15,150. Also, 1 lot adjoining south and fronting the avenue, being also a full lot, for $8,000. Also, 2 lots, south side of Fortieth street, 100 feet west of Fifth-avenue, each full size, at $6,000 each, the whole for $35,150. The above lots were purchased for Dr. ARMITAGE, Baptist Church, formerly the Norfolk street Baptist Church. They will forthwith erect a lecture-room on a portion of the street lots, and with the coming year, a fine church edifice in the avenue, 75 feet front, by 125 feet in depth, which will no doubt prove to be an additional ornament to Fifth-avenue.

We report the sale of 5½ lots on the south side of Ninety-third street, about half way between 3rd and 4th-avenues, with an old frame building on, sold at the rate of $10 50 full lot.

THURSDAY, Oct. 12.
